HISTORY

OF

JOHN BULL.

Publiſhed from

A Manuſcript found in the Cabinet of the famous Sir H. Poleſworth, in the Year 1712.

PREFACE.

WHEN I was firſt called to the office of hiſtoriographer to John Bull, he expreſſed himſelf to this purpoſe: Sir Humphry Poleſworth *, I know you are a plain-dealer; it is for that reaſon I have choſen you for this important truſt; ſpeak the truth, and ſpare not. That I might fulfil thoſe his honourable intentions, I obtained leave to repair to, and attend him in his moſt ſecret retirements; and I put the journals of all tranſactions into a ſtrong box, to be opened at a fitting occaſion, after the manner of the hiſtoriographers of ſome eaſtern monarchs: this I thought was the ſafeſt way; though I declare I was never afraid to be choped † by my maſter for telling the truth. It is from thoſe journals that my memoirs are compiled: therefore let not poſterity a thouſand years hence look for truth in the voluminous annals of pedants, who are entirely ignorant of the ſecret ſprings of great actions; if they do, let me tell them they will be nebuſed ‡.

WITH incredible pains have I endeavoured to copy the ſeveral beauties of the ‖ ancient and modern hiſtorians; the impartial temper of Herodotus; the gravity, auſterity, and ſtrict morals of Thucydides; the extenſive knowledge of Xenophon, the ſublimity and grandeur of Titus Livius; and, to avoid the careleſs ſtyle of Polybius, I have borrowed conſiderable ornaments from Dionyſius Halicarnaſſeus and Diodorus Siculus. The ſpecious gilding of Tacitus I have endeavoured to ſhun. Mariana, Davila, and Fr. Paulo, are thoſe amongſt the moderns whom I thought moſt worthy of imitation; but I cannot be ſo diſingenuous, as not to own the infinite obligations I have to the Pilgrim's Progreſs of John Bunyan, and the Tenter Belly of the reverend Joſeph Hall.

FROM ſuch encouragement and helps, it is eaſy to gueſs to what a degree of perfection I might have brought this great work, had it not been nipt in the bud by ſome illiterate people in both houſes of parliament, who, envying the great figure I was to make in future ages, under pretence of raiſing money for the war, have padlocked † all thoſe very pens that were to celebrate the actions of their heroes, by ſilencing at once the whole univerſity of Grub-ſtreet. I am perſuaded that nothing but the proſpect of an approaching peace could have encouraged them to make ſo bold a ſtep. But ſuffer me, in the name of the reſt of the matriculates of that famous univerſity, to aſk them ſome plain queſtions: Do they think that peace will bring along with it the golden age? Will there be never a dying ſpeech of a traitor? Are Cethegus and Catiline turned ſo tame, that there will be no opportunity to cry about the ſtreets, A dangerous plot? Will peace bring ſuch plenty, that no gentleman will have occaſion to go upon the highway, or break into a houſe? I am ſorry that the world ſhould be ſo much impoſed upon by the dreams of a falſe prophet, as to imagine the Millennium is at hand. O Grub-ſtreet! thou fruitful nurſery of towering genius's! How do I lament thy downfal? Thy ruin could never be meditated by any who meant well to engliſh-liberty: No modern Lycæum will ever equal thy glory: whether in ſoft paſtorals thou didſt ſing the flames of pampered apprentices and coy cook-maids, or mournful ditties of departing lovers; or if to Maeonian ſtrains thou raiſedſt thy voice, to record the ſtratagems, the arduous exploits, and the nocturnal ſcalade of needy heroes, the terror of our peaceful citizens, deſcribing the powerful Betty or the artful Picklock, or the ſecret caverns and grotto's of Vulcan ſweating at his forge, and ſtamping the queen's image on viler metals, which he retails for beef and pots of ale: or if thou wert content, in ſimple narrative, to relate the cruel acts of implacable revenge, or the complaints of raviſhed virgins, bluſhing to tell their adventures before the liſtening crowd of city damſels; whilſt in thy faithful hiſtory thou interminglest the graveſt counſels and the pureſt morals. Nor leſs acute and piercing wert thou in thy ſearch and pompous deſcription of the works of nature; whether in proper and emphatick terms thou didſt paint the blazing comet's fiery tail, the ſtupendous force of dreadful thunder and earthquakes, and the unrelenting inundations. Sometimes, with Machiavelian ſagacity, thou unravelledſt intrigues of ſtate, and the traiterous conſpiracies of rebels, giving wiſe counſel to monarchs. How didſt thou move our terror and our pity with thy paſſionate ſcenes between Jack-Catch and the heroes of the Old-Bailey! How didſt thou deſcribe their intrepid march up Holborn-hill! Nor didſt thou ſhine leſs in thy theological capacity, when thou gaveſt ghoſtly counſel to dying felons, and didſt record the guilty pangs of ſabbath-breakers. How will the noble arts of John Overton's † painting and ſculpture now languiſh! where rich invention, proper expreſſion, correct deſign, divine attitudes, and artful contraſt, heightened with the beauties of Clar. Obſcur. embelliſhed thy celebrated pieces, to the delight and aſtoniſhment of the judicious multitude! Adieu, perſuaſive eloquence! the quaint metaphor, the poignant irony, the proper epithet, and the lively ſimile, are fled for ever! Inſtead of theſe, we ſhall have, I know not what! — The illiterate will tell the reſt with pleaſure ‡.

I HOPE the reader will excuſe this digreſſion, due by way of condolence to my worthy brethren of Grub-ſtreet, for the approaching barbarity that is likely to overſpread all its regions, by this oppreſſive and exorbitant tax. It has been my good fortune to receive my education there; and, ſo long as I preſerved ſome figure and rank amongſt the learned of that ſociety, I ſcorned to take my degree either at Utrecht or Leyden, though I was offered it gratis by the profeſſors in thoſe univerſities.

AND now, that poſterity may not be ignorant in what age ſo excellent a hiſtory was written (which would otherwiſe, no doubt, be the ſubject of its enquiries) I think it proper to inform the learned of future times, that it was compiled when Lewis the XIVth was king of France, and Philip his grandſon of Spain; when England and Holland, in conjunction with the emperor and the allies, entered into a war againſt theſe two princes, which laſted ten years, under the management of the duke of Marlborough, and was put to a concluſion by the treaty of Utrecht, under the miniſtry of the earl of Oxford, in the year 1713.

I know not what—Our enemies will tell the reſt with pleaſure. This preface was by order of the houſe of commons burnt by the hangman in Palace-yard, Weſtminſter.

MANY

MANY at that time did imagine the hiſtory of John Bull, and the perſonages mentioned in it, to be allegorical, which the author would never own. Notwithſtanding, to indulge the reader's fancy and curioſity, I have printed at the bottom of the page the ſuppoſed alluſions of the moſt obſcure parts of the ſtory.

THE HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

CHAP. I.

The occaſion of the law-ſuit.

I NEED not tell you of the great quarrels that happened in our neighbourhood ſince the death of the late lord Strutt * ; how the parſon †, and a ‡ cunning attorney, got him to ſettle his eſtate upon his couſin ‖ Philip Baboon to the great diſappointment of his couſin § eſquire South. Some ſtick not

* Charles II. of Spain died without iſſue, and † Card. Portocarero and the ‡ Marſhal of Harcourt, employed, as is ſuppoſed, by the Houſe of Bourbon, prevailed upon him to make a will, by which he ſettled the ſucceſſion of the Spaniſh monarchy upon to ſay, that the parſon and the attorney forged a will, for which they were well paid by the family of the Baboons: let that be as it will, it is matter of fact, that the honour and eſtate have continued ever ſince in the perſon of Philip Baboon.

‖ Philip of Bourbon Duke of Anjou, though his right had by the moſt ſolemn renunciations been barred in favour of

You know, that the lord Strutts have for many years been poſſeſs'd of a very great landed eſtate, well-condition'd, wooded, watered, with coal, ſalt, tin, copper, iron, &c. all within themſelves; that it has been the misfortune of that family to be the property of their ſtewards, tradeſmen, and inferior ſervants, which has brought great incumberances upon them; at the ſame time, their not abating of their expenſive way of living has forced them to mortgage their beſt manors: it is credibly reported, that the butchers and bakers bill of a lord Strutt, that lived two hundred years ago, are not yet paid.

When Philip Baboon came firſt to the poſſeſſion of the lord Strutt's eſtate, his tradeſmen, as is uſual upon ſuch occaſions, waited upon him to wiſh him joy and beſpeak his cuſtom: the two chief were * John Bull the clothier, and † Nic. Frog the linen-draper: They told him, that the Bulls and Frogs had ſerved the lord Strutts with drapery-ware for many years; that they were honeſt and fair dealers; that their bills had never been queſtion'd; that the lord Strutts lived generouſly, and never uſed to dirty their fingers with pen, ink, and counters; that his lordſhip might depend upon their honeſty; that they would uſe him as

* the Engliſh and

† the Dutch congratulated Philip upon a ſucceſſion, which they were not able to prevent: but to diſappoint the ambition of kindly, as they had done his predeceſſors. The young lord ſeemed to take all in good part, and diſmiſſed them with a deal of ſeeming content, aſſuring them he did not intend to change any of the honourable maxims of his predeceſſors.

CHAP. II.

How Bull and Frog grew jealous, that the lord Strutt intended to give all his cuſtom to his grandfather Lewis Baboon *.

IT happened unfortunately for the peace of our neighbourhood, that this young lord had an old cunning rogue, or (as the Scots call it) a falſe loon, of a grandfather, that one might juſtly call a Jack of all trades † ; ſometimes you would ſee him behind his counter ſelling broad-cloth, ſometimes meaſuring linen ; next day he would be dealing in mercery-ware ; high heads, ribbons, gloves, fans, and lace he underſtood to a nicety ; Charles Mather could not bubble a young beau better with a toy ; nay, he would deſcend even to the ſelling of tape, garters, and ſhoebuckles : when ſhop was ſhut up, he would go about the neighbourhood, and earn half a crown by teaching the young men and maids to dance. By theſe methods he had acquired immenſe riches, which he uſed to ſquander ‡ away at back-ſword, quarter-ſtaff, and cudgel-play, in which he took great plea-ſure, and challenged all the country. You will ſay it is no wonder if Bull and Frog ſhould be jealous of this fellow. "It is not impoſſible (ſays Frog to "Bull) but this old rogue will take the management "of the young lord's buſineſs into his hands; be- "ſides the raſcal has good ware, and will ſerve him "as cheap as any body. In that caſe, I leave you to "judge what muſt become of us and our families; we "muſt ſtarve, or turn journeymen to old Lewis Ba- "boon; therefore, neighbour, I hold it adviſeable, "that we write to young lord Strutt to know the bot- "tom of this matter."

CHAP. III.

A copy of Bull and Frog's letter to lord Strutt.

MY LORD,

I Suppoſe your lordſhip knows, that the Bulls and the Frogs have ſerved the lord Strutts with all ſorts of drapery-ware time out of mind: and whereas we are jealous, not without reaſon, that your lordſhip intends henceforth to buy of your grandſire old Lewis Baboon; this is to inform your lordſhip, that this proceeding does not ſuit with the circumſtances of our families, who have lived and made a good figure in the world by the generoſity of the lord Strutts. Therefore we think fit to acquaint your lordſhip, that you muſt find ſufficient ſecurity * to us, our heirs and aſſigns, that you will not employ Lewis Baboon; or elſe

* "ſecurity to England and Hol- "land for their dominions, navi- "gation, and commerce, and to "prevent the union of the two "monarchies France and Spain." To effect theſe purpoſes, queen Anne was by

we will take our remedy at law, clap an action upon you of 20,000 l. for old debts, ſeize and diſtrain your goods and chattels, which, conſidering your lordſhip's circumſtances, will plunge you into difficulties, from which it will not be eaſy to extricate yourſelf; therefore we hope, when your lordſhip has better conſidered on it, you will comply with the deſire of

Your loving friends,

JOHN BULL.
NIC. FROG.

Some of Bull's friends adviſed him to take gentler methods with the young lord: but John naturally loved rough play. It is impoſſible to expreſs the ſurprize of the lord Strutt upon the receipt of this letter; he was not fluſh in ready either to go to law, or clear old debts, neither could he find good bail: he offered to bring matters to a friendly accommodation; and promiſed upon his word of honour, that he would not change his drapers; but all to no purpoſe, for Bull and Frog ſaw clearly that old Lewis would have the cheating of him.

CHAP. IV.

How Bull and Frog went to law with lord Strutt about the premiſes, and were join'd by the reſt of the tradeſmen.

ALL endeavours of accommodation between lord Strutt and his drapers proved vain; jealouſies increas'd, and indeed it was rumoured abroad, that lord Strutt had beſpoke his new liveries of old Lewis Ba- boon. This coming to Mrs. Bull's * ears, when John Bull came home, he found all his family in an uproar. Mrs. Bull, you muſt know, was very apt to be cholerick. "You ſot, ſays ſhe, you loiter about ale-houſes "and taverns, ſpend your time at billiards, ninepins, or "puppet-ſhows, or flaunt about the ſtreets in your "new gilt chariot, never minding me nor your numerous family. Don't you hear how lord Strutt has "beſpoke his liveries at Lewis Baboon's ſhop? Don't "you ſee how that old fox ſteals away your cuſtomers, "and turns you out of your buſineſs every day, and "you ſit like an idle drone with your hands in your "pockets? Fie upon it! up man, rouze thyſelf; I'll "ſell to my ſhift, before I'll be ſo uſed by that knave." You muſt think Mrs. Bull had been pretty well tuned up by Frog, who chimed in with her learned harangue. No further delay now, but to council learned in the law they go, who unanimouſly aſſured them both of the juſtice and infallible ſucceſs of their law-ſuit.

I told you before, that old Lewis Baboon was a ſort of a Jack of all trades, which made the reſt of the tradeſmen jealous, as well as Bull and Frog; they hearing of the quarrel were glad of an opportunity of joining againſt old Lewis Baboon, provided that Bull and Frog would bear the charges of the ſuit; even lying Ned, † the chimney-ſweeper of Savoy, and Tom ‡ the Portugal duſtman, put in their claims; and the cauſe was put into the hands of ‖ Humphry Hocus the attorney.

* the parliament precipitated into the war as a principal. Among her allies were

† the Duke of Savoy and

‡ the King of Portugal; and ‖ John Churchill Duke of Marlborough was appointed general in chief of the confederate army.

A de-

A declaration was drawn up to ſhew "That Bull "and Frog had undoubted right by preſcription to be "drapers to the lord Strutts; that there were ſeveral "old contracts to that purpoſe; that Lewis Baboon "had taken up the trade of clothier and draper, with- "out ſerving his time or purchaſing his freedom; that "he ſold goods, that were not marketable, without "the ſtamp; that he himſelf was more fit for a bully "than a tradeſman, and went about through all the "country fairs challenging people to fight prizes, "wreſtling and cudgel-play;" and abundance more to this purpoſe.

CHAP. V.

The true characters of John Bull, Nic. Frog, and Hocus.

FOR the better underſtanding the following hiſtory, the reader ought to know, that Bull, in the main, was an honeſt plain-dealing fellow, cholerick, bold, and of a very unconſtant temper; he dreaded not old Lewis either at back-ſword, ſingle faulchion, or cudgel-play; but then he was very apt to quarrel with his beſt friends, eſpecially if they pretended to govern him: if you flatter'd him, you might lead him like a child. John's temper depended very much upon the air; his ſpirits roſe and fell with the weather-glaſs. John was quick, and underſtood his buſineſs very well; but no man alive was more careleſs in looking into his accounts, or more cheated by partners, apprentices, and ſervants. This was occaſioned by his being a boon companion, loving his bottle and his diverſion; for, to ſay truth, no man kept a better houſe than John, nor ſpent his money more generouſly. By plain and fair dealing John had acquir'd ſome plumbs, and might have kept them, had it not been for his unhappy law-ſuit.

Nic. Frog was a cunning ſly whoreſon, quite the reverſe of John in many particulars; covetous, frugal; minded domeſtick affairs; would pinch his belly to ſave his pocket; never loſt a farthing by careleſs ſervants, or bad debtors. He did not care much for any ſort of diverſions, except tricks of high german artiſts and leger-de-main: no man exceeded Nic. in theſe; yet it muſt be owned, that Nic. was a fair dealer, and in that way acquired immenſe riches.

Hocus was an old cunning attorney; and tho' this was the firſt conſiderable ſuit, that ever he was engaged in, he ſhewed himſelf ſuperior in addreſs to moſt of his profeſſion: he kept always good clerks, he loved money, was ſmooth-tongued, gave good words, and ſeldom loſt his temper: he was not worſe than an infidel, for he provided plentifully for his family; but he loved himſelf better than them all: the neighbours reported, that he was henpecked; which was impoſſible by ſuch a mild-ſpirited woman as his wife was.

CHAP. VI.

Of the various ſucceſs of the law-ſuit.

LAW is a bottomleſs pit; it is a cormorant, a harpy that devours every thing. John Bull was flatter'd by the lawyers, that his ſuit would not laſt above a year or two at moſt: that before that time he would be

be in quiet poſſeſſion of his buſineſs: yet ten long years did Hocus ſteer his cauſe through all the meanders of the law, and all the courts. No ſkill, no addreſs was wanting; and, to ſay truth, John did not ſtarve his cauſe; there wanted not yellow-boys to fee counſel, hire witneſſes, and bribe juries: lord Strutt was generally caſt, never had one verdict in his favour; * and John was promiſed that the next, and the next, would be the final determination; but alas! that final determination and happy concluſion was like an inchanted iſland, the nearer John came to it, the farther it went from him: new trials upon new points ſtill aroſe; new doubts, new-matters to be cleared; in ſhort, lawyers ſeldom part with ſo good a cauſe, till they have got the oyſter, and their clients the ſhell. John's ready money, book-debts, bonds, mortgages, all went into the lawyer's pockets: then John began to borrow money upon Bank ſtock and Eaſt-India bonds: now and then a farm went to pot: at laſt † it was thought a good expedient to ſet up eſquire South's title, to prove the will forged, and diſpoſſeſs Philip lord Strutt at once. Here again was a new field for the lawyers, and the cauſe grew more intricate than ever. John grew madder and madder; wherever he met any of lord Strutt's ſervants, he tore off their cloaths: now and then you

* The war was carried on againſt France and Spain with great ſucceſs, and a peace might have been concluded upon the principles of the alliance; but a partition of the Spaniſh dominions in favour of the houſe of Auſtria, and an engagement that the ſame perſon ſhould never be king of France and Spain, were not now thought ſufficient.

† It was inſiſted that the will in favour of Philip was contrary to treaty; and there was a parliamentary declaration for continuing the war, till he ſhould be dethroned.

would ſee them come home naked, without ſhoes, ſtockings, and linen. As for old Lewis Baboon, he was reduced to his laſt ſhift, though he had as many as any other: his children were reduced from rich ſilks to Doily ſtuffs, his ſervants in rags, and bare-footed; inſtead of good victuals, they now lived upon neck-beef, and bullock's liver: in ſhort, no-body got much by the matter, but the men of law.

CHAP. VII.

How John Bull was ſo mightily pleaſed with his ſucceſs, that he was going to leave off his trade, and turn lawyer.

IT is wiſely obſerved by a great philoſopher, that habit is a ſecond nature; this was verified in the caſe of John Bull, who, from an honeſt and plain tradeſman, had got ſuch a haunt about the courts of juſtice, and ſuch a jargon of law-words, that he concluded himſelf as able a lawyer as any that pleaded at the bar, or ſat on the bench: He was overheard one day talking to himſelf after this manner: "‡ How ca-
"priciouſly does fate or chance diſpoſe of mankind?
"How ſeldom is that buſineſs allotted to a man, for "which he is fitted by nature? It is plain, I was in"tended for a man of law: how did my guardians
"miſtake my genius in placing me, like a mean ſlave,
"behind a counter? Bleſs me! what immenſe eſtates
"theſe fellows raiſe by the law? Beſides, it is the pro-"feſſion of a gentleman. What a pleaſure is it to be ‡ The manners and ſentiments of the nation became extravagant and chimerical.

" victorious in a cauſe? to ſwagger at the bar? What " a fool am I to drudge any more in this woollen trade? " for a lawyer I was born, and a lawyer I will be; one " is never to old too learn." All this while John had conned over ſuch a catalogue of hard words, as were enough to conjure up the devil; theſe he uſed to babble indifferently in all companies, eſpecially at coffee-houſes; ſo that his neighbour tradeſmen began to ſhun his company as a man that was cracked. Inſtead of the affairs at Blackwell-hall, and price of broad-cloath, wool, and bayſes, he talks of nothing but actions upon the caſe, returns, capias, alias capias, demurrers, venire facias, replevins, ſuperſedeas's, certiorari's, writs of error, actions of trover and converſion, treſpaſſes, precipe's and dedimus. This was matter of jeſt to the learned in law; however, Hocus, and the reſt of the tribe, encouraged John in his fancy, aſſuring him, that he had a great genius for law; that they queſtion'd not, but in time he might raiſe money enough by it to reimburſe him all his charges; that if he ſtudied, he would undoubtedly arrive to the dignity of a lord chief juſtice †: as for the advice of honeſt friends and neighbours, John deſpiſed it; he looked upon them as fellows of a low genius, poor groveling mechanicks; John reckoned it more honour to have got one favourable verdict, than to have ſold a bale of broad-cloth. As for Nic. Frog, to ſay the truth, he was more prudent; for though he followed his lawſuit cloſely, he neglected not his ordinary buſineſs, but was both in court and in his ſhop at the proper hours.

CHAP. VIII.

JOHN had not run on a madding ſo long, had it not been for an extravagant bitch of a wife, whom Hocus perceiving John to be fond of, was reſolved to win over to his ſide. It is a true ſaying, that the laſt man of the pariſh, that knows of his cuckoldom, is himſelf. It was obſerved by all the neighbourhood, that Hocus had dealings with John's wife ‖, that were not ſo much for his honour; but this was perceived by John a little too late: ſhe was a luxurious jade, loved ſplendid equipages, plays, treats and balls, differing very much from the ſober manners of her anceſtors, and by no means fit for a tradeſman's wife. Hocus fed her extravagancy (what was ſtill more ſhameful) with John's own money. Every body ſaid, that Hocus had a month's mind to her body; be that as it will, it is matter of fact, that upon all occaſions ſhe run out extravagantly on the praiſe of Hocus. When John uſed to be finding fault with his bills, ſhe uſed to reproach him as ungrateful to his greateſt benefactor; one that had taken ſo much pains in his law-ſuit, and retrieved his family from the oppreſſion of old Lewis Baboon. A good ſwinging ſum of John's readieſt caſh went towards building of Hocus's country-houſe §. This affair between Hocus and Mrs. Bull was now ſo open, that all the world were ſcandalized

How do you mean, ſays John, by perſonal reflections? I hope in God, wife, he did not reflect upon you? "No, "thank God, my reputation is too well eſtabliſhed "in the world to receive any hurt from ſuch a foul-"mouthed ſcoundrel as he; his doctrine tends only "to make huſbands tyrants, and wives ſlaves; muſt "we be ſhut up, and huſbands left to their liberty? "Very pretty indeed! a wife muſt never go abroad "with a Platonick to ſee a play or a ball; ſhe muſt "never ſtir without her huſband; nor walk in Spring-"garden with a couſin. I do ſay, huſband, and I will "ſtand by it, that without the innocent freedoms of "life, matrimony would be a moſt intolerable ſtate; "and that a wife's virtue ought to be the reſult of her "own reaſon, and not of her huſband's government; "for my part, I would ſcorn a huſband that would be "jealous, if he ſaw a fellow a-bed with me ‡." † The houſe of commons voted this ſermon a libel on her majeſty and her government, the revolution, the proteſtant ſucceſſion, and the parliament; they impeached him of high crimes and miſdeameanours; he was ſilenced for three years, and the ſermon burnt by the hangman.

this while John's blood boiled in his veins; he was now confirmed in all his ſuſpicions; jade, bitch, and whore were the beſt words, that John gave her *. Things went from better to worſe, till Mrs Bull aimed a † knife at John, though John threw a bottle ‡ at her head very brutally indeed ‖: and after this, there was nothing but confuſion: bottles, glaſſes, ſpoons, plates, knives, forks, and diſhes flew about like duſt; the reſult of which was, that § Mrs. Bull received a bruiſe in her right ſide, of which ſhe died half a year after. The bruiſe impoſthumated, and afterwards turned to a ſtinking ulcer, which made every body ſhy to come near her; yet ſhe wanted not the help of many able phyſicians, who attended very diligently, and did what men of ſkill could do: but all to no purpoſe, for her condition was now quite deſperate, all regular phyſicians, and her neareſt relations, having given her over.

In ſpite of all applications, the patient grew worſe every day; ſhe ſtunk ſo, no-body durſt come within a ſtone's throw of her, except thoſe quacks who attended her cloſe, and apprehended no danger. If one aſked them, how Mrs. Bull did? Better and better, ſaid they; the parts heal, and her conſtitution mends; if ſhe ſubmits to our government, ſhe will be abroad in a little time. At laſt *, one of them was ſent for in great haſte, his patient grew worſe and worſe: when he came, he affirmed that it was a groſs miſtake, and that ſhe was never in a fairer way: bring hither the ſalve, ſays he, and give a plentiful draught of my cordial. As he was applying his ointments, and adminiſtring the cordial, the patient gave up the ghoſt, to the great confuſion of the quack, and the great joy of Bull and his friends. JOHN quickly got the better of his grief, and ſeeing that neither his conſtitution, or the affairs of his family could permit him to live in an unmarried ſtate, he reſolved to get him another wife; a couſin of his laſt wife's was propoſed, but John would have no more of the breed: in ſhort, he wedded a ſober country gentlewoman, of a good family, and a plentiful fortune, the reverſe of the other in her temper; not but that ſhe loved money, for ſhe was ſaving, and applied her fortune to pay John's clamorous debts, that the unfrugal methods of his laſt wife, and this ruinous law-ſuit, had brought him into. How John looked over his attorney's bill.

WHEN John firſt brought out the bills, the ſurprize of all the family was unexpreſſible at the prodigious dimenſions of them; they would have meaſured with the beſt bale of cloth in John's ſhop. Fees to judges, puny judges, clerks, prothonotaries, philizers, chirographers, under-clerks, proclamators, council, witneſſes, jury-men, marſhals, tipſtaffs, cryers, porters; for enrollings, exemplifications, bails, vouchers, returns, caveats, examinations, filings of writs, entries, declarations, replications, recordats, noli proſequi's, certiorari's, mittimus's, demurrers, ſpecial verdicts, informations, ſcire facias, ſuperſedeas, habeas corpus, coach-hire, treating of witneſſes, &c. "Verily, "ſays John, there are a prodigious number of learned "words in this law; what a pretty ſcience it is!" "Ay! but huſband, you have paid for every ſyllable "and letter of theſe fine words; bleſs me, what im-"menſe ſums are at the bottom of the accompt!" John ſpent ſeveral weeks in looking over his bills, and by comparing and ſtating his accompts he diſcovered, that, beſides the extravagance of every article, he had been egregiouſly cheated; that he had paid for council that were never fee'd, for writs that were never drawn, for dinners that were never dreſſed, and journeys that were never made: In ſhort, that the tradeſmen, lawyers, and Frog, had agreed to throw the burden of the law-ſuit upon his ſhoulders.

CHAP. XII.

How John grew angry, and reſolved to accept a compoſition * ; and what methods were practiſed by the lawyers for keeping him from it.

WELL might the learned Daniel Burgeſs ſay, that a law-ſuit is a ſuit for life. He that ſows his grain upon marble, will have many a hungry belly before harveſt. This John felt by woeful experience. John's cauſe was a good milch cow, and many a man ſubſiſted his family out of it. However John began to think it high time to look about him. He had a couſin in the country, one Sir † Roger Bold, whoſe predeceſſors had been bred up to the law, and knew as much of it as any body; but having left off the profeſſion for ſome time, they took great pleaſure in compounding law-ſuits among their neighbours, for which they were the averſion of the gentlemen of the long robe, and at perpetual war with all the country attorneys. John put his cauſe in Sir Roger's hands, deſiring him to make the beſt of it: the news had no ſooner reached the ears of the lawyers, but they were all in an uproar. They brought all the reſt of the tradeſmen upon John: ‡ 'Squire South ſwore he was betrayed, that he would ſtarve before he compounded; Frog ſaid he was highly wronged; even lying Ned the chimney-ſweeper, and Tom the duſtman complained, that their intereſt was ſa-

The lawyers, ſollicitors, Hocus, and his clerks, were all up in arms, at the news of the compoſition ‖; they abuſed him and his wife moſt ſhamefully, "You "ſilly, aukward, ill-bred, country-ſow, (quoth one) "have you no more manners than to rail at Hocus, that "ſaved that clod-pated numſkull'd ninny-hammer of "yours from ruin, and all his family? No ſtone was left unturned to fright John from his compoſition: § ſometimes they ſpread reports at coffee-houſes, that John and his wife were run mad; that they intended to give up houſe, and make over all their eſtate to Lewis Baboon; that John had been often heard talking to himſelf, and ſeen in the ſtreets without ſhoes or ſtockings; that he did nothing from morning till night but beat his ſervants, after having been the beſt maſter alive: as for his wife, ſhe was a mere natural. Sometimes John's houſe was beſet with a whole regiment of attorney's clerks, bailiffs, and bailiffs-followers, and other ſmall retainers of the law, who threw ſtones at his windows, and dirt at himſelf, as he went along the ſtreet. When John complained of want of ready money to carry on his ſuit, they adviſed him to pawn his plate and jewels, and that Mrs Bull ſhould ſell her linen and wearing-cloaths.

Mrs. Bull's vindication of the indiſpenſable duty of cuckoldom, incumbent upon wives in caſe of the tyranny, infidelity, or inſufficiency of huſbands: being a full anſwer to the doctor's ſermon againſt adultery *.

JOHN found daily freſh proofs of the infidelity and bad deſigns of his deceaſed wife; amongſt other things, one day looking over his cabinet, he found the following paper:

§ and it was ſaid, that the nation would at laſt be ſacrificed to the ambition of France.

IT

IT is evident that matrimony is founded upon an original contract, whereby the wife makes over the right ſhe has by the law of nature to the concubitus vagus, in favour of the huſband; by which he acquires the property of all her poſterity. But then the obligation is mutual: and where the contract is broken on one ſide, it ceaſes to bind on the other. Where there is a right, there muſt be a power to maintain it, and to puniſh the offending party. This power I affirm to be that original right, or rather that indiſpenſable duty of cuckoldom, lodged in all wives in the caſes above-mentioned. No wife is bound by any law, to which herſelf has not conſented: all œconomical government is lodged originally in the huſband and wife, the executive part being in the huſband; both have their privileges ſecured to them by law and reaſon: but will any man infer from the huſband's being inveſted with the executive power, that the wife is deprived of her ſhare, and that which is the principal branch of it, the original right of cuckoldom? And that ſhe has no remedy leſt, but preces et lachrymæ, or an appeal to a ſupreme court of judicature? No leſs frivolous are the arguments, that are drawn from the general appellations and terms of huſband and wife. A huſband denotes ſeveral different ſorts of magiſtracy, according to the uſages and cuſtoms of different climates and countries. In ſome eaſtern nations it ſignifies a tyrant, with the abſolute power of life and death: in Turkey it denotes an arbitrary governor, with power of perpetual impriſonment: in Italy it gives the huſband the power of poiſon and padlocks: in the countries of England, France, and Holland, it has a quite different meaning, implying a free and equal government, ſecuring to the wife in certain caſes the liberty of cuckoldom, and the property of pin-money, and ſeparate maintenance. So that the arguments drawn from the terms of huſband and wife are fallacious, and by no means fit to ſupport a tyrannical doctrine, as that of abſolute unlimited chaſtity, and conjugal fidelity.

The general exhortations to chaſtity in wives are meant only for rules in ordinary caſes, but they naturally ſuppoſe three conditions of ability, juſtice, and fidelity in the huſband: ſuch an unlimited, unconditioned fidelity in the wife could never be ſuppoſed by reaſonable men; it ſeems a reflection upon the ch—ch, to charge her with doctrines that countenance oppreſſion.

This doctrine of the original right of cuckoldom is congruous to the law of nature, which is ſuperior to all human laws, and for that I dare appeal to all wives: it is much to the honour of our Engliſh wives, that they have never given up that fundamental point; and that though in former ages they were muffled up in darkneſs and ſuperſtition, yet that notion ſeemed engraven on their minds, and the impreſſion ſo ſtrong, that nothing could impair it.

To aſſert the illegality of cuckoldom upon any pretence whatſoever, were to caſt odious colours upon the married ſtate, to blacken the neceſſary means of perpetuating families: ſuch laws can never be ſuppoſed to have been deſigned to defeat the very end of matrimony, the propagation of mankind. I call them neceſſary means; for in many caſes what other means are left? Such a doctrine wounds the honour of families; lies; unſettles the titles to kingdoms, honours, and eſtates; for if the actions from which ſuch ſettlements ſpring were illegal, all that is built upon them muſt be ſo too: but the laſt is abſurd, therefore the firſt muſt be ſo likewiſe. What is the cauſe that Europe groans at preſent under the heavy load of a cruel and expenſive war, but the tyrannical cuſtom of a certain nation, and the ſcrupulous nicety of a ſilly Queen, † in not exerciſing this indiſpenſable duty of cuckoldom, whereby the kingdom might have had an heir, and a controverted ſucceſſion might have been avoided? Theſe are the effects of the narrow maxims of your clergy, That one muſt not do evil, that good may come of it.

The aſſertor of this indefeaſible right, and jus divinum of matrimony, do all in their hearts favour gallants, and the pretenders to married women; for if the true legal foundation of the married ſtate be once ſapped, and inſtead thereof tyrannical maxims introduced, what muſt follow but elopements inſtead of ſecret and peaceable cuckoldom?

From all that has been ſaid, one may clearly perceive the abſurdity of the doctrine of this ſeditious, diſcontented, hot-headed, ungifted, unedifying preacher aſſerting, That the grand ſecurity of the matrimonial ſtate, and the pillar upon which it ſtands, is founded upon the wife's belief of an abſolute unconditional fidelity to the huſband's bed: by which bold aſſertion he ſtrikes at the root, digs the foundation, and removes the baſis, upon which the happineſs of a married ſtate is built. As for his perſonal reflections, I would gladly know who are

thoſe wanton wives he ſpeaks of? who are thoſe ladies of high ſtations, that he ſo boldly traduces in his ſermon? It is pretty plain, who theſe aſperſions are aimed at, for which he deſerves the pillory or ſomething worſe.

In confirmation of this doctrine of the indiſpenſable duty of cuckoldom, I could bring the example of the wiſeſt wives in all ages, who by theſe means have preſerved their huſband's families from ruin and oblivion by want of poſterity: but what has been ſaid, is a ſufficient ground for puniſhing this pragmatical parſon.

CHAP. XIV.

The two great parties of wives, the * Devoto's and the Hitts.

THE doctrine of unlimited chaſtity and fidelity in wives was univerſally eſpouſed by all huſbands; who went about the country, and made the wives ſign papers, ſignifying their utter deteſtation and abhorrence of Mrs. Bull's wicked doctrine of the indiſpenſable duty of cuckoldom. Some yielded, others refuſed to part with their native liberty; which gave riſe to two great parties amongſt the wives, the Devoto's and the Hitts. Though it muſt be owned, the diſtinction was more nominal than real; for the Devoto's would abuſe freedoms ſometimes; and thoſe who were diſtinguiſhed by the name of Hitts, were often very honeſt. At the ſame time there came out an ingenious treatiſe with the title of good advice to huſbands; in which they are counſelled not to truſt too much to their wives owning the doctrine of unlimited conjugal fidelity, and

* Thoſe who were for and againſt the doctrine of non-reſiſtance.

ſo to neglect family duty, and a due watchfulneſs over the manners of their wives; that the greateſt ſecurity to huſbands was a vigorous conſtitution, good uſage of their wives, and keeping them from temptation; many huſbands having been ſufferers by their truſting too much to general profeſſions, as was exemplified in the caſe of a fooliſh and negligent huſband, who, truſting to the efficacy of this principle, was undone by his wife's elopement from him.

THE lawyers, as their laſt effort to put off the compoſition, ſent * Don Diego to John. Don Diego was a very worthy gentleman, a friend to John, his mother, and preſent wife; and therefore ſuppoſed to have ſome influence over her: he had been ill uſed himſelf by John's lawyers, but, becauſe of ſome † animoſity to ſir Roger, was againſt the compoſition ‡: the conference between him and Mrs. Bull was word for word as follows.

ſir and madam (which, tho' I ſay it, is our due) he calls us goody and gaffer ſuch-a-one: ſays, he did us a great deal of honour to board with us; huffs and dings at ſuch a rate, becauſe we will not ſpend the little we have left to get him the title and eſtate of lord Strutt; and then, forſooth, we ſhall have the honour to be his woollen-drapers. Beſides, eſquire South will be eſquire South ſtill; fickle, proud, and ungrateful. If he behaves himſelf ſo, when he depends on us for his daily bread, can any man ſay, what he will do when he is got above the world?

D. Diego. And would you loſe the honour of ſo noble and generous an undertaking? Would you rather accept the ſcandalous compoſition, and truſt that old rogue, Lewis Baboon?

Mrs. Bull. Look you, friend Diego, if we law it on, till Lewis turns honeſt, I am afraid our credit will run low at Blackwell-hall. I wiſh every man had his own; but I ſtill ſay, that lord Strutt's money ſhines as bright and chinks as well as eſquire South's. I don't know any other hold, that we tradeſmen have of theſe great folks, but their intereſt; buy dear and ſell cheap, and I'll warrant ye you will keep your cuſtomer. The worſt is, that lord Strutt's ſervants have got ſuch a haunt about that old rogue's ſhop, that it will coſt us many a firkin of ſtrong beer to bring them back again; and the longer they are in a bad road, the harder it will be to get them out of it.

D. Diego. But poor Frog, what has he done! On my conſcience, if there be an honeſt, ſincere man in the world. it is that Frog.

Mrs.

Mrs. Bull. I think, I need not tell you how much Frog has been obliged to our † family from his childhood; he carries his head high now, but he had never been the man he is, without our help. Ever ſince the commencement of this law-ſuit it has been the buſineſs of Hocus, in ſharing our expences, to plead for Frog. "Poor Frog (ſays he) is in hard circumſtan-"ces, he has a numerous family, and lives from hand "to mouth; his children don't eat a bit of good vic-"tuals from one year's end to the other, but live upon "ſalt herring, ſowre crud, and borecole; he does his "utmoſt, poor fellow, to keep things even in the "world, and has exerted himſelf beyond his ability "in this law-ſuit; but he really has not wherewithal "to go on. What ſignifies this hundred pounds? "place it upon your ſide of the account; it is a great "deal to poor Frog, and a trifle to you." This has been Hocus's conſtant language, and I am ſure he has had obligations enough to us to have acted another part.

D. Diego. No doubt Hocus meant all this for the beſt, but he is a tender-hearted, charitable man; Frog is indeed in hard circumſtances.

Mrs. Bull. Hard circumſtances! I ſwear this is provoking to the laſt degree ‡. All the time of the law-ſuit, as faſt as I have mortgaged, Frog has purchaſed: from a plain tradeſman with a ſhop, warehouſe, and a country hutt with a dirty fiſh-pond at the end of it, he is now grown a very rich country gentleman, with a noble landed eſtate, noble palaces, manors, parks, gardens, and farms, finer than any we were ever maſter of. Is it not ſtrange, when my huſband diſburſed great ſums every term, Frog ſhould be purchaſing ſome new farm or manor? So that if this law-ſuit laſts, he will be far the richeſt man in his country. What is worſe than all this, he ſteals away my cuſtomers every day: twelve of the richeſt and the beſt have left my ſhop by his perſuaſion, and whom, to my certain knowledge, he has under bonds never to return again: judge you if this be neighbourly dealing.

D. Diego. Frog is indeed pretty cloſe in his dealings, but very honeſt: you are ſo touchy, and take things ſo hotly, I am ſure there muſt be ſome miſtake in this.

Mrs. Bull. A plaguy one indeed! You know, and have often told me of it, how Hocus and thoſe rogues kept my huſband John Bull drunk for five years together with punch and ſtrong waters: I am ſure he never went one night ſober to bed, till they got him to ſign the ſtrangeſt deed, that ever you ſaw in your life. The methods they took to manage him I'll tell you another time; at preſent I'll read only the writing.

ARTICLES of AGREEMENT

betwixt JOHN BULL, Clothier,

and NICHOLAS FROG,

Linen-draper *.

I. THAT, for maintaining the ancient good correſpondence and friendſhip between the ſaid parties, I Nicholas Frog do ſolemnly engage and promiſe to keep peace in John Bull's family; that neither his wife, children, nor ſervants give him any trouble, diſturbance, or moleſtation whatſoever, but to oblige them all to do their duty quietly in their reſpective ſtations: and whereas the ſaid John Bull, from the aſſured confidence that he has in my friendſhip, has appointed me executor of his laſt will and teſtament, and guardian to his children, I do undertake for me, my heirs and aſſigns, to ſee the ſame duly executed and performed, and that it ſhall be unalterable in all its parts by John Bull, or any body elſe: for that purpoſe it ſhall be lawful and allowable for me to enter his houſe at any hour of the day or night; to break open bars, bolts, and doors, cheſts of drawers, and ſtrong boxes, in order to ſecure the peace of my friend John Bull's family, and to ſee his will duly executed.

* a treaty which had been concluded by the lord Townſhend at the Hague between the Queen and the States in 1709. for ſecuring the proteſtant ſucceſſion, and for ſettling a barrier for Holland againſt France. And it was reſolved, that ſeveral articles of this treaty were deſtructive to the trade and intereſt of Great Britain, that lord Townſhend had no authority to agree to them, and that he and all thoſe, who adviſed ratifying the treaty, were enemies to their country.

II. In conſideration of which kind neighbourly office of Nicholas Frog, in that he has been pleaſed to accept of the aforeſaid truſt, I John Bull having duly conſidered, that my friend Nicholas Frog at this time lives in a marſhy ſoil and unwholeſome air, infeſted with fogs and damps deſtructive of the health of himſelf, wife, and children; do bind and oblige me, my heirs and aſſigns, to purchaſe for the ſaid Nicholas Frog, with the beſt and readieſt of my caſh, bonds, mortgages, goods, and chattels, a landed eſtate, with parks, gardens, palaces, rivers, fields, and outlets, conſiſting of as large extent, as the ſaid Nicholas Frog ſhall think fit. And whereas the ſaid Nicholas Frog is at preſent hemmed in too cloſe by the grounds of Lewis Baboon, maſter of the ſcience of defence, I the ſaid John Bull do oblige myſelf, with the readieſt of my caſh, to purchaſe and incloſe the ſaid grounds, for as many fields and acres as the ſaid Nicholas ſhall think fit; to the intent that the ſaid Nicholas may have free egreſs and regreſs, without lett or moleſtation, ſuitable to the demands of himſelf and family.

III. Furthermore, the ſaid John Bull obliges himſelf to make the country neighbours of Nicholas Frog allot a certain part of yearly rents to pay for the repairs of the ſaid landed eſtate, to the intent that his good friend Nicholas Frog may be eaſed of all charges.

IV. And whereas the ſaid Nicholas Frog did contract with the deceaſed lord Strutt about certain liberties, privileges, and immunities, formerly in the poſſeſſion of the ſaid John Bull; I the ſaid John Bull do freely by theſe preſents renounce, quit, and make over to the ſaid Nicholas, the liberties, privileges, and immunities contracted for, in as full a manner, as if they never had belonged to me.

V. The ſaid John Bull obliges himſelf, his heirs and aſſigns, not to ſell one rag of broad or coarſe cloth to any gentleman within the neighbourhood of the ſaid Nicholas, except in ſuch quantities and ſuch rates, as the ſaid Nicholas ſhall think fit.

Signed and ſealed,

JOHN BULL,
NIC. FROG.

The reading of this paper put Mrs. Bull in ſuch a paſſion, that ſhe fell downright into a fit, and they were forced to give her a good quantity of the ſpirit of hartſhorn before ſhe recovered.

D. Diego. Why in ſuch a paſſion, couſin? conſidering your circumſtances at that time, I don't think this ſuch an unreaſonable contract. You ſee Frog, for all this, is religiouſly true to his bargain; he ſcorns to hearken to any compoſition without your privacy.

Mrs. Bull. You know the * contrary. Read that letter.

[Reads the ſuperſcription] For Lewis Baboon, maſter of the noble ſcience of defence.

SIR,

I Underſtand, that you are at this time treating with my friend John Bull about reſtoring the lord Strutt's cuſtom, and beſides allowing him certain privileges of parks and fiſh-ponds; I wonder how you, that are a man that knows the world, can talk with that ſimple fellow. He has been my bubble theſe twenty years, and to my certain knowledge underſtands no more of his own affairs, than a child in ſwaddling cloaths. I know he has got a ſort of a pragmatical ſilly jade of a wife, that pretends to take him out of my hands: but you and ſhe both will find yourſelves miſtaken; I'll find thoſe that ſhall manage her; and for him, he dares as well be hanged as make one ſtep in his affairs without my conſent. If you will give me what you promiſed him, I will make all things eaſy, and ſtop the deeds of ejectment againſt lord Strutt: if you will not, take what follows: I ſhall have a good action againſt you, for pretending to rob me of my bubble. Take this warning from

Your loving friend,

NIC. FROG.

I am told, couſin Diego, you are one of thoſe who have undertaken to manage me, and that you have ſaid you will carry a green bag yourſelf, rather than we ſhall make an end of our law-ſuit: I'll teach them and you too to manage.

D. Diego. For God's ſake, madam, why ſo cholerick? I ſay this letter is ſome forgery; it never entered into the head of that honeſt man, Nic. Frog, to do any ſuch thing.

Mrs. Bull. I can't abide you: you have been railing theſe twenty years at eſquire South, Frog, and Hocus, calling them rogues and pick-pockets, and now they are turned the honeſteſt fellows in the world. What is the meaning of all this?

D. Diego. Pray tell me how you came to employ this ſir Roger in your affairs, and not think of your old friend Diego?

Mrs. Bull. So, ſo, there it pinches. To tell you truth, I have employed ſir Roger in ſeveral weighty affairs, and have found him truſty and honeſt, and the poor man always ſcorned to take a farthing of me. I have abundance that profeſs great zeal, but they are damnable greedy of the pence. My huſband and I are now in ſuch circumſtances, that we muſt be ſerved upon cheaper terms, than we have been.

D. Diego. Well, couſin, I find I can do no good with you; I am ſorry that you will ruin yourſelf by truſting this ſir Roger.

CHAP. XVI.

How the guardians of the deceaſed Mrs. Bull's three daughters came to John, and what advice they gave him; wherein are briefly treated the characters of the three daughters: alſo John Bull's anſwer to the three guardians *.

I Told you in a former chapter, that Mrs. Bull, before ſhe departed this life, had bleſſed John with three daughters. I need not here repeat their names, neither would I willingly uſe any ſcandalous reflections upon young ladies, whoſe reputations ought to be very tenderly handled; but the characters of theſe were ſo well known in the neighbourhood, that it is doing them no injury, to make a ſhort deſcription of them.

† The eldeſt was a termagant, imperious, prodigal, lewd, profligate wench, as ever breathed: ſhe uſed to rantipole about the houſe, pinch the children, kick the ſervants, and torture the cats and the dogs; ſhe would rob her father's ſtrong box, for money to give the young fellows that ſhe was fond of: ſhe had a noble air, and ſomething great in her mien, but ſuch a noiſome infectious breath, as threw all the ſervants that dreſſed her into conſumptions; if ſhe ſmelt to the freſheſt noſegay, it would ſhrivel and wither as it had been blighted: ſhe uſed to come home in her cups, and break the china and the looking-glaſſes; and was of ſuch an irregular temper, and ſo intirely given up to her paſſion, that you might argue as well with the North wind, as with her ladyſhip: ſo expenſive, that the income of three dukedoms was not enough to ſupply her extravagance. Hocus loved her beſt, believing her to be his own, got upon the body of Mrs. Bull.

‡ The ſecond daughter, born a year after her ſiſter, was a peeviſh, froward, ill-conditioned creature as ever was, ugly as the devil, lean, haggard, pale, with ſaucer eyes, a ſharp noſe, and hunch-backed: but active, ſprightly, and diligent about her affairs. Her ill complexion was occaſioned by her bad diet, which was coffee, morning, noon, and night: ſhe never reſted quietly a bed; but uſed to diſturb the whole family with ſhrieking out in her dreams, and plague them next day with interpreting them, for ſhe took them all for goſpel: ſhe would cry out murder, and diſturb the whole neighbourhood; and when John came running down ſtairs to enquire what the matter was: nothing, forſooth, only her maid had ſtuck a pin wrong in her gown: ſhe turned away one ſervant for putting too much oil in her ſallad, and another for putting too little ſalt in her water-gruel; but ſuch, as by flattery had procured her eſteem, ſhe would indulge in the greateſt crime. Her father had two coachmen; when one was in the coach-box, if the coach ſwung but the leaſt to one ſide, ſhe uſed to ſhriek ſo loud, that all the ſtreet concluded ſhe was overturned; but though the other was eternally drunk, and had overturned the whole family, ſhe was very angry with her father for turning him away. Then ſhe uſed to carry tales and ſtories from one to another, till ſhe had ſet the whole neighbourhood together by the ears; and this was the only diverſion ſhe took pleaſure in. She never went abroad, but ſhe brought home ſuch a bundle of monſtrous lyes, as would have amazed any mortal but ſuch as knew her: of a whale that had ſwallowed a fleet of ſhips; of the lions being let out of the Tower to deſtroy the proteſtant religion; of the pope's being ſeen in a brandy-ſhop at Wapping; and of a prodigious ſtrong man, that was going to ſhove down the cupola of St. Paul's; of three millions of five pound pieces, that eſquire South had found under an old wall; of blazing ſtars, flying dragons, and abundance of ſuch ſtuff. All the ſervants in the family made high court to her, for ſhe domineered there, and turned out and in whom ſhe pleaſed; only there was an old grudge between her and ſir Roger, whom ſhe mortally hated, and uſed to hire fellows to ſquirt kennel water upon him, as he paſſed along the ſtreets; ſo that he was forced forced conſtantly to wear a ſurtout of oiled cloth, by which means he came home pretty clean, except where the ſurtout was a little ſcanty.

* As for the third, ſhe was a thief, and a common mercenary proſtitute, and that without any ſollicitation from nature, for ſhe owned ſhe had no enjoyment. She had no reſpect of perſons, a prince or a porter was all one, according as they paid; yea, ſhe would leave the fineſt gentleman in the world to go to an ugly pocky fellow for ſix-pence more. In the practice of her profeſſion ſhe had amaſſed vaſt magazines of all ſorts of things; ſhe had above five hundred ſuits of fine cloaths, and yet went abroad like a cynder-wench: ſhe robbed and ſtarved all the ſervants, ſo that no-body could live near her.

So much for John's three daughters, which you will ſay were rarities to be fond of: yet nature will ſhew itſelf; no-body could blame their relations for taking care of them; and therefore it was that Hocus, with two other of the guardians, thought it their duty to take care of the intereſt of the three girls, and give John their beſt advice before he compounded the law-ſuit

Hocus. What makes you ſo ſhy of late, my good friend? There's no-body loves you better than I, nor has taken more pains in your affairs: as I hope to be ſaved, I would do any thing to ſerve you; I would crawl upon all four to ſerve you; I have ſpent my health and paternal eſtate in your ſervice. I have indeed a ſmall pittance left, with which I might retire, and with as good a conſcience as any man; but the thoughts of this diſgraceful compoſition ſo touches me to the quick, that I cannot ſleep: after I had brought the cauſe to the laſt ſtroke, that one verdict more had quite ruined old Lewis and lord Strutt, and put you in the quiet poſſeſſion of every thing; then to compound! I cannot bear it. This cauſe was my favourite, I had ſet my heart upon it; it is like an only child; I cannot endure it ſhould miſcarry; for God's ſake conſider only to what a diſmal condition old Lewis is brought. He is at an end of all his caſh; his attorneys have hardly one trick left; they are at an end of all their chicane; beſides, he has both his law and his daily bread now upon truſt. Hold out only one term longer, and I'll warrant you, before the next we ſhall have him in the Fleet. I'll bring him to the pillory; his ears ſhall pay for his perjuries. For the love of God don't compound: let me be damned, if you have a friend in the world, that loves you better than I: there is no-body can ſay I am covetous, or that I have any intereſt to purſue, but yours.

2*d Guardian.* There is nothing ſo plain, as that this Lewis has a deſign to ruin all his neighbouring tradeſmen; and at this time he has ſuch a prodigious income by his trade of all kinds, that if there is not ſome ſtop put to his exorbitant riches, he will monopolize every thing; no-body will be able to ſell a yard of drapery or mercery ware but himſelf. I then hold it adviſeable, that you continue the law-ſuit, and burſt him at once. My concern for the three poor motherleſs children obliges me to give you this advice; for their eſtates, poor girls! depend upon the ſucceſs of this cauſe.

3d Guardian. I own this writ of ejectment has coſt dear; but then conſider it is a jewel well worth the purchaſing at the price of all you have. None but Mr. Bull's declared enemies can ſay, he has any other ſecurity for his cloathing trade, but the ejectment of lord Strutt. The only queſtion then that remains to be decided, is, who ſhall ſtand the expences of the ſuit? To which the anſwer is as plain; who but he, that is to have the advantage of the ſentence? When eſquire South has got poſſeſſion of his title and honour, is not John Bull to be his clothier? Who then, but John, ought to put him in poſſeſſion? Aſk but any indifferent gentleman, who ought to bear his charges at law? and he will readily anſwer, his tradeſmen. I do therefore affirm, and I will go to death with it, that, being his clothier, you ought to put him in quiet poſſeſſion of his eſtate, and, with the ſame generous ſpirit you have begun it, compleat the good work. If you perſiſt in the bad meaſures you are now in, what muſt become of the three poor orphans? My heart bleeds for the poor girls.

John Bull. You are all very eloquent perſons; but give me leave to tell you, you expreſs a great deal more concern for the three girls than for me; I think my intereſt ought to be conſidered in the firſt place. As for you, Hocus, I can't but ſay you have managed my law-ſuit with great addreſs, and much to my honour; and though I ſay it, you have been well paid for it. Why muſt the burthen be taken off Frog's back, and laid upon my ſhoulders? He can drive about his own parks and fields in his gilt chariot, when I have been forced to mortgage my eſtate:

eſtate: his note will go farther than my bond. Is it not matter of fact, that from the richeſt tradeſman in all the country, I am reduced to beg and borrow from ſcriveners and uſurers, that ſuck the heart, blood, and guts out of me? and what is all this for: Did you like Frog's countenance better than mine? Was not I your old friend and relation? Have I not preſented you nobly? Have I not clad your whole family? Have you not had an hundred yards at a time of the fineſt cloth in my ſhop? Why muſt the reſt of the tradeſmen be not only indemnified from charges, but forbid to go on with their own buſineſs, and what is more their concern than mine? As to holding out this term, I appeal to your own conſcience, has not that been your conſtant diſcourſe theſe ſix years, one term more, and old Lewis goes to pot. If thou art ſo fond of my cauſe, be generous for once, and lend me a brace of thouſands. Ah Hocus! Hocus! I know thee; not a ſous to ſave me from goal, I trow. Look ye, gentlemen, I have lived with credit in the world, and it grieves my heart never to ſtir out of my doors but to be pulled by the ſleeve by ſome raſcally dun or other? "Sir, remember my bill: there is a ſmall concern of a thouſand "pounds, I hope you think on't, Sir." And to have theſe uſurers tranſact my debts at coffee-houſes, and ale-houſes, as if I were going to break up ſhop. Lord! that ever the rich, the generous John Bull, clothier, the envy of all his neighbours, ſhould be brought to compound his debts for five ſhillings in the pound; and to have his name in an advertiſement for a ſtatute of bankrupt. The thought of it makes me mad. I have read ſomewhere in the Apocrypha, that one ſhould not conſult with a woman touching her of whom ſhe is jealous; nor with a merchant concerning exchange; nor with a buyer of ſelling; nor with an unmerciful man of kindneſs, &c. I could have added one thing more, nor with an attorney about compounding a law-ſuit. The ejectment of lord Strutt will never do. The evidence is crimp; the witneſſes ſwear backwards and forwards, and contradict themſelves; and his tenants ſtick by him. One tells me, that I muſt carry on my ſuit, becauſe Lewis is poor; another, becauſe he is ſtill too rich: whom ſhall I believe? I am ſure of one thing, that a penny in the purſe is the beſt friend John can have at laſt; and who can ſay that this will be the laſt ſuit I ſhall be engaged in? Beſides, if this ejectment were practicable, is it reaſonable, that when eſquire South is loſing his money to ſharpers and pick-pockets, going about the country with fidlers and buffoons, and ſquandering his income with hawks and dogs, I ſhould lay out the fruits of my honeſt induſtry in a law-ſuit for him, only upon the hopes of being his clothier? And when the cauſe is over, I ſhall not have the benefit of my project for want of money to go to market. Look ye, gentlemen, John Bull is but a plain man; but John Bull knows when he is ill uſed. I know the infirmity of our family; we are apt to play the boon companion, and throw away our money in our cups: but it was an unfair thing in you, gentlemen, to take advantage of my weakneſs, to keep a parcel of roaring bullies about me day and night, with huzza's and hunting-horns, and ringing the changes on butchers cleavers, never let me cool, and make me ſet my hand to papers, when I could hardly hold my pen. There will come a day of reckoning for all that proceeding. In the mean time, gentlemen, I beg you will let me into my affairs a little, and that you would not grudge me the ſmall remainder of a very great eſtate.

CHAP. XVII.

Eſquire South's meſſage and letter to Mrs. Bull.

THE arguments uſed by Hocus and the reſt of the guardians had hitherto proved inſufficient †: John and his wife could not be perſuaded to bear the expence of eſquire South's law-ſuit. They thought it reaſonable, that ſince he was to have the honour and advantage, he ſhould bear the greateſt ſhare of the charges; and retrench what he loſt to ſharpers and ſpent upon country dances and puppet-plays, to apply it to that uſe. This was not very grateful to the eſquire; therefore, as the laſt experiment he reſolved to ſend ‡ ſignior Benenato, maſter of his fox-hounds, to Mrs. Bull, to try what good he could do with her. This ſignior Benenato had all the qualities of a fine gentleman, that were fit to charm a lady's heart; and if any perſon in the world could have perſuaded her, it was he. But ſuch was her unſhaken fidelity to her huſband, and the conſtant purpoſe of her mind to purſue his intereſt, that the moſt refined arts of gallantry that were practiſed, could not ſeduce her heart. The necklaces, diamond croſſes, and rich bracelets that were offered, ſhe rejected with the utmoſt ſcorn and diſdain. The muſick and ſerenades, that were given her, ſounded more ungratefully in her ears than the noiſe of a ſcreech-owl; however, ſhe received eſquire South's letter by the hands of ſignior Benenato with that reſpect, which became his quality. The copy of the letter is as follows, in which you will obſerve he changes a little his uſual ſtyle.

MADAM,

THE writ of ejectment againſt Philip Baboon, (pretended lord Strutt) is juſt ready to paſs: there want but a few neceſſary forms, and a verdict or two more, to put me in the quiet poſſeſſion of my honour and eſtate: I queſtion not, but that according to your wonted generoſity and goodneſs you will give it the finiſhing ſtroke; an honour that I would grudge any body but yourſelf. In order to eaſe you of ſome part of the charges, I promiſe to furniſh pen, ink, and paper, provided you pay for the ſtamps. Beſides, I have ordered my ſtewards to pay out of the readieſt and beſt of my rents five pounds ten ſhillings a year, till my ſuit is finiſhed. I wiſh you health and happineſs, being with due reſpect,

MADAM,

Your aſſured friend,

What

What anſwer Mrs. Bull returned to this letter, you ſhall know in my ſecond part, only they were at a pretty good diſtance in their propoſals; for as eſquire South only offered to be at the charges of pen, ink, and paper, Mrs. Bull refuſed any more than to lend her barge † to carry his council to Weſtminſter-hall.

† This proportion was however thought to be ſo inconſiderable, that the letter produced no other effect, than the convoy of the forces by the Engliſh fleet to Barcelona.

THE HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

PART II.

THE PUBLISHER'S PREFACE.

THE world is much indebted to the famous ſir Humphrey Poleſworth for his ingenious and impartial account of John Bull's law-ſuit; yet there is juſt cauſe of complaint againſt him, in that he relates it only by parcels, and won't give us the whole work: This forces me, who am only the publiſher, to beſpeak the aſſiſtance of his friends and acquaintance to engage him to lay aſide that ſtingy humour, and gratify the curioſity of the publick at once. He pleads in excuſe, that they are only private memoirs, wrote for his own uſe, in a looſe ſtyle, to ſerve as a help to his ordinary converſation *. I repreſented to him the good reception the firſt part had met with; that though calculated only for the meridian of Grub-ſtreet, it was yet taken notice of by the better ſort; that the world was now ſufficiently acquainted with John Bull, and intereſted itſelf in his concerns. He anſwered, with a ſmile, that he had indeed ſome trifling things to impart, that concerned John Bull's relations and domeſtick affairs; if theſe would ſatisfy me, he gave free leave to make uſe of them, becauſe they would ſerve to make the hiſtory of the law-ſuit more intelligible. When I had looked over the manuſcript, I found likewiſe ſome further account of the compoſition, which perhaps may not be unacceptable to ſuch as have read the former part.

CHAP. I.

The character of † John Bull's mother.

JOHN had a mother, whom he loved and honoured extremely, a diſcreet, grave, ſober, good-conditioned, cleanly old gentlewoman as ever lived; ſhe was none of your croſs-grained, termagant, ſcolding jades, that one had as good be hanged as live in the houſe with, ſuch as are always cenſuring the conduct, and telling ſcandalous ſtories of their neighbours, extolling their own good qualities, and undervaluing thoſe of others.

* This excuſe of ſir Humphry can only relate to the ſecond part, or ſequel of the hiſtory. See the preface to the firſt part.

On

On the contrary, ſhe was of a meek ſpirit, and as ſhe was ſtrictly virtuous herſelf, ſo ſhe always put the beſt conſtruction upon the words and actions of her neighbours, except where they were irreconcileable to the rules of honeſty and decency. She was neither one of your preciſe prudes, nor one of your fantaſtical old belles, that dreſs themſelves like girls of fifteen: as ſhe neither wore a ruff, forehead cloth, nor high-crowned hat, ſo ſhe had laid aſide feathers, flowers, and crimpt ribbons in her head-dreſs, furbelo-ſcarfs, and hooped-petticoats. She ſcorned to patch and paint, yet ſhe loved to keep her hands and her face clean. Though ſhe wore no flaunting laced ruffles, ſhe would not keep herſelf in a conſtant ſweat with greaſy flannel: though her hair was not ſtuck with jewels, ſhe was not aſhamed of a diamond croſs: ſhe was not like ſome ladies, hung about with toys and trinkets, tweezer-caſes, pocket-glaſſes, and eſſence bottles; ſhe uſed only a gold watch and an almanack, to mark the hours and the holy-days.

Her furniture was neat and genteel, well fancied with a bon gouſt. As ſhe affected not the grandeur of a ſtate with a canopy, ſhe thought there was no offence in an elbow-chair; ſhe had laid aſide your carving, gilding, and japan work, as being too apt to gather dirt; but ſhe never could be prevailed upon to part with plain wainſcot and clean hangings. There are ſome ladies, that affect to ſmell a ſtink in every thing; they are always highly perfumed, and continually burning frankincenſe in their rooms; ſhe was above ſuch affectation, yet ſhe never would lay aſide the uſe of brooms and ſcrubbing-bruſhes, and ſcrupled not lay her linen in freſh lavender.

She was no leſs genteel in her behaviour, well-bred, without affectation, in the due mean between one of your affected curt'ſying pieces of formality, and your romps that have no regard to the common rules of civility. There are ſome ladies, that affect a mighty regard for their relations : We muſt not eat to-day, for my uncle Tom, or my couſin Betty, died this time ten years: Let's have a ball to-night, it is my neighbour ſuch-a-one's birth-day ; ſhe looked upon all this as grimace ; yet ſhe conſtantly obſerved her huſband's birth-day, her wedding-day, and ſome few more.

Though ſhe was a truly good woman, and had a ſincere motherly love for her ſon John, yet there wanted not thoſe who endeavoured to create a miſunderſtanding between them, and they had ſo far prevailed with him once, that he turned her out of doors †, to his great ſorrow, as he found afterwards, for his affairs went on at ſixes and ſevens.

She was no leſs judicious in the turn of her converſation and choice of her ſtudies, in which ſhe far exceeded all her ſex : your rakes that hate the company of all ſober, grave gentlewomen, would bear hers ; and ſhe would, by her handſome manner of proceeding, ſooner reclaim them than ſome that were more ſowre and reſerved : ſhe was a zealous preacher up of chaſtity, and conjugal fidelity in wives, and by no means a friend to the new-fangled doctrine of the indiſpenſable duty of cuckoldom : though ſhe advanced her opinions with a becoming aſſurance, yet ſhe never uſhered them in, as ſome poſitive creatures will do, with dogmatical aſſertions, this is infallible ; I cannot be miſtaken ; none but a rogue can deny it. It has been obſerved, that ſuch people are oftener in the wrong than any body.

Though ſhe had a thouſand good qualities, ſhe was not without her faults, amongſt which one might perhaps reckon too great lenity to her ſervants, to whom ſhe always gave good counſel, but often too gentle correction. I thought I could not ſay leſs of John Bull's mother, becauſe ſhe bears a-part in the following tranſactions.

CHAP. II.

JOHN had a ſiſter, a poor girl that had been ſtarved at nurſe; any body would have gueſſed miſs to have been bred up under the influence of a cruel ſtepdame, and John to be the fondling of a tender mother. John looked ruddy and plump, with a pair of cheeks like a trumpeter; miſs looked pale and wan, as if ſhe had the green-ſickneſs; and no wonder, for John was the darling, he had all the good bits, was crammed with good pullet, chicken, pig, gooſe, and capon, while miſs had only a little oatmeal and water, or a dry cruſt without butter. John had his golden pippins, peaches, and nectarines; poor miſs a crab-apple, ſloe, or a blackberry. Maſter lay in the beſt apartment, with his bedchamber towards the ſouth ſun. Miſs lodged in a garret, expoſed to the north wind, which ſhrivelled her countenance; however, this uſage, though it ſtunted

the girl in her growth, gave her a hardy conſtitution; ſhe had life and ſpirit in abundance, and knew when ſhe was ill uſed: now and then ſhe would ſeize upon John's commons, ſnatch a leg of a pullet, or a bit of good beef, for which they were ſure to go to fiſty-cuffs. Maſter was indeed too ſtrong for her; but miſs would not yield in the leaſt point, but, even when maſter had got her down, ſhe would ſcratch and bite like a tyger; when he gave her a cuff on the ear, ſhe would prick him with her knitting-needle. John brought a great chain one day to tye her to the bed-poſt, for which affront, miſs aimed a penknife at his heart †. In ſhort, theſe quarrels grew up to rooted averſions; they gave one another nick-names: ſhe called him gundy-guts, and he called her louſy Peg; though the girl was a tight clever wench as any was, and through her pale looks you might diſcern ſpirit and vivacity, which made her not, indeed, a perfect beauty, but ſomething that was agreeable. It was barbarous in parents not to take notice of theſe early quarrels, and make them live better together, ſuch domeſtick feuds proving afterwards the occaſion of misfortunes to them both. Peg had, indeed, ſome odd humours, and comical antipathy, for which John would jeer her. "What think you of my ſiſter Peg (ſays he) "that faints at the ſound of an organ, and yet will dance "and friſk at the noiſe of a bag-pipe?" "What's that "to you, gundy-guts, (quoth Peg) every body's to chuſe "their own muſick." Then Peg had taken a fancy not to ſay her Pater-noſter, which made people imagine

Of the three brothers, that have made ſuch a clutter in the world, lord Peter, Martin, and Jack, * Jack had of late been her inclinations: lord Peter ſhe deteſted: nor did Martin ſtand much better in her good graces, but Jack had found the way to her heart. I have often admired, what charms ſhe diſcovered in that aukward booby, till I talked with a perſon that was acquainted with the intrigue, who gave me the following account of it.

CHAP. III.

† Jack's charms, or the method by which he gained Peg's heart.

IN the firſt place, Jack was a very young fellow, by much the youngeſt of the three brothers, and people, indeed, wondered how ſuch a young upſtart jack-anapes ſhould grow ſo pert and ſaucy, and take ſo much upon him.

Jack bragged of greater abilities than other men; he was well-gifted, as he pretended; I need not tell you what ſecret influence that has upon the ladies.

Jack had a moſt ſcandalous tongue, and perſuaded Peg that all mankind, beſides himſelf, were poxed by that ſcarlet-faced whore ‡ Signiora Bubonia. " As for " his brother, lord Peter, the tokens were evident on " him, blotches, ſcabs, and the corona: his brother " Martin, though he was not quite ſo bad, had ſome " nocturnal pains, which his friends pretended were " only ſcorbutical; but he was ſure it proceeded from " a worſe cauſe." By ſuch malicious inſinuations, he had poſſeſſed the lady, that he was the only man in the world of a ſound, pure, and untainted conſtitution: though there were ſome that ſtuck not to ſay, that Signiora Bubonia and Jack railed at one another, only the better to hide an intrigue; and, that Jack had been found with Signiora under his cloak, carrying her home in a dark ſtormy night.

Jack was a prodigious ogler; he would ogle you the outſide of his eye inward, and the white upward.

Jack gave himſelf out for a man of a great eſtate in the fortunate iſlands; of which the ſole property was veſted in his perſon: by this trick he cheated abundance of poor people of ſmall ſums, pretending to make over plantations in the ſaid iſlands; but when the poor wretches came there with Jack's grant, they were beat, mocked, and turned out of doors.

I told you that Peg was whimſical, and loved any thing that was particular: in that way, Jack was her man, for he neither thought, ſpoke, dreſſed, nor acted like other mortals: he was for your bold ſtrokes, he railed at fops, though he was himſelf the moſt affected in the world; inſtead of the common faſhion, he would viſit his miſtreſs in a mourning cloak, band, ſhort cuffs, and a peaked beard. He invented a way of coming into a room backwards, which, he ſaid, ſhewed more humility, and leſs affectation: where other people ſtood, he ſat; where they ſat, he ſtood; when he went to court, he uſed to kick away the ſtate, and ſit down by his prince cheek by jole: Confound theſe ſtates, ſays he, they are a modern invention: when he ſpoke to his prince, he always turned his br—ch upon him: if he was adviſed to faſt for his health, he would eat roaſt-beef; beef; if he was allowed a more plentiful diet, then he would be ſure that day to live upon water gruel; he would cry at a wedding, laugh and make jeſts at a funeral.

He was no leſs ſingular in his opinions; you would have burſt your ſides to hear him talk of politicks *: "All government, ſays he, is founded upon the right "diſtribution of puniſhments; decent executions keep "the world in awe; for that reaſon the majority of "mankind ought to be hanged every year. For "example, I ſuppoſe the magiſtrate ought to paſs "an irreverſible ſentence upon all blue-eyed children "from the cradle †; but, that there may be ſome "ſhew of juſtice in this proceeding, theſe children "ought to be trained up by maſters, appointed for "that purpoſe, to all ſorts of villany; that they may "deſerve their fate, and the execution of them may "ſerve as an object of terror to the reſt of mankind." As to the giving of pardons, he had this ſingular method ‡, That when theſe wretches had the rope about their necks, it ſhould be inquired, who believed they ſhould be hanged, and who not? The firſt were to be pardoned, the laſt hanged out-right. Such as were once pardoned, were never to be hanged afterwards for any crime whatſoever ‖. He had ſuch ſkill in phyſiognomy, that he would pronounce peremptorily upon a man's face, That fellow, ſays he, do what he will, can't avoid hanging; he has a hanging look. By the ſame art, he would prognoſticate a principality to a ſcoundrel.

* Abſolute predeſtination.
† Reprobation.
‡ Saving faith; a belief that one ſhall certainly be ſaved.
‖ Election.

He was no leſs particular in the choice of his ſtudies; they were generally bent towards exploded chimera's, † the perpetuum mobile, the circular ſhot, philoſopher's ſtone, ſilent gun-powder, making chains for fleas, nets for flies, and inſtruments to unravel cobwebs and ſplit hairs.

Thus, I think, I have given a diſtinct account of the methods he practiſed upon Peg. Her brother would now and then aſk her, "What a devil doſt thou ſee in "that pragmatical coxcomb to make thee ſo in love "with him? he is a fit match for a taylor or a ſhoe-"maker's daughter, but not for you, that are a gentle-"woman." "Fancy is free, quoth Peg: I'll take my "own way, do you take yours. I do not care for your "flaunting beaus, that gang with their breaſts open, "and their ſarks over their waiſtcoats; that accoſt me "with ſpeeches out of Sidney's Arcadia or the Academy "of Compliments. Jack is a ſober, grave, young man; "though he has none of your ſtudied harangues, his "meaning is ſincere: he has a great regard to his fa-"ther's will; and he that ſhews himſelf a good ſon, "will make a good huſband; beſides, I know he has "the original deed of conveyance to the fortunate "iſlands; the others are counterfeits." There is nothing ſo obſtinate as a young lady in her amours; the more you croſs her, the worſe ſhe is.

CHAP. IV.

How the relations reconciled John and his ſiſter Peg, and what return Peg made to John's meſſage *.

JOHN BULL, otherwiſe a good-natured man, was very hard-hearted to his ſiſter Peg, chiefly from an averſion he had conceived in his infancy. While he flouriſhed, kept a warm houſe, and drove a plentiful trade, poor Peg was forced to go hawking and peddling about the ſtreets, ſelling knives, ſciſſars, and ſhoe-buckles; now and then carried a baſket of fiſh to the market; ſewed, ſpun, and knit for a livelihood, till her fingers-ends were ſore, and when ſhe could not get bread for her family, ſhe was forced to hire them out at journey-work to her neighbours. Yet in theſe her poor circumſtances ſhe ſtill preſerved the air and mien of a gentlewoman, a certain decent pride, that extorted reſpect from the haughtieſt of her neighbours; when ſhe came into any full aſſembly, ſhe would not yield the pas to the beſt of them. If one aſked her, are not you related to John Bull? "Yes, ſays ſhe; he has the ho-"nour to be my brother." So Peg's affairs went, till all the relations cried out ſhame upon John for his barbarous uſage of his own fleſh and blood; that it was an eaſy matter for him to put her in a creditable way of living, not only without hurt but with advantage to himſelf, being ſhe was an induſtrious perſon, and might be ſerviceable to him in his way of buſineſs. "Hang "her, jade, quoth John; I can't endure her, as "long as ſhe keeps that raſcal Jack's company."

* The treaty of Union between England and Scotland.

They

They told him, the way to reclaim her was to take her into his houſe; that by converſation the childiſh humours of their younger days might be worn out. Theſe arguments were enforced by a certain incident. It happened that John was at that time about making his * will, and entailing his eſtate, the very ſame in which Nic. Frog is named executor. Now his ſiſter Peg's name being in the entail, he could not make a thorough ſettlement without her conſent. There was, indeed, a malicious ſtory went about, as if John's laſt wife had fallen in love with Jack as he was † eating cuſtard on horſeback; that ſhe perſuaded John to take his ſiſter into the houſe, the better to drive on the intrigue with Jack, concluding he would follow his miſtreſs Peg. All I can infer from this ſtory, is, that when one has got a bad character in the world, people will report and believe any thing of one, true or falſe. But to return to my ſtory; when Peg received John's meſſage, ſhe huffed and ſtormed like the devil ‡: "My brother "John, quoth ſhe, is grown wondrous kind-hearted "all of a ſudden, but I meikle doubt, whether it "be not mair for their own conveniency than for "my good; he draws up his writs and his deeds, "forſooth, and I muſt ſet my hand to them, unſight, "unſeen. terpoſition of good friends, and by many a bonny thing that was ſent, and many more that were pro-miſed

miſed Peg, the matter was concluded, and Peg taken into the houſe upon certain articles: one of which was, that ſhe might have the freedom of Jack's converſation *, and might take him for better and for worſe, if ſhe pleaſed; provided always, he did not come into the houſe at unſeaſonable hours, and diſturb the reſt of the old woman, John's mother.

CHAP. V.

Of ſome quarrels, that happened after Peg was taken into the family †.

IT is an old obſervation, that the quarrels of relations are harder to reconcile than any other; injuries from friends fret and gall more, and the memory of them is not ſo eaſily obliterated. This is cunningly repreſented by one of your old ſages, called Æſop, in the ſtory of the bird, that was grieved extremely at being wounded with an arrow feathered with his own wing; as alſo of the oak, that let many a heavy groan, when he was cleft with a wedge of his own timber.

There was no man in the world leſs ſubject to rancour than John Bull, conſidering how often his good-nature had been abuſed; yet I don't know, but he was too apt to hearken to tattling people, that carried tales between him and ſiſter Peg, on purpoſe to ſow jealouſies, and ſet them together by the ears. They ſay that there were ſome hardſhips put upon Peg, which had been better let alone; but it was the buſineſs of good people to reſtrain the injuries on one

† The purchaſe money of Peg's farm was ill paid; then Peg loved a little good liquor, and the ſervants ſhut up the wine-cellar; but for that Peg found a trick, for ſhe made a ‡ falſe key. Peg's ſervants complained that they were debarred from all manner of buſineſs, and never ſuffered to touch the leaſt thing within the houſe ‖; if they offered to come into the warehouſe, then ſtrait went the yard ſlap over their noddle; if they ventured into the counting-room, a fellow would throw an ink-bottle at their head; if they came into the beſt apartment, to ſet any thing there in order, they were ſaluted with a broom; if they meddled with any thing in the kitchen, it was odds but the cook laid them over the pate with a ladle; one that would have got into the ſtables, was met by two raſcals, who fell to work with him with a bruſh and a curry-comb; ſome climbing up into the coach-box, were told that one of their companions had been there before, that could not drive; then ſlap went the long whip about their ears.

On the other hand it was complained, that Peg's ſervants were always aſking for § drink-money; that they had more than their ſhare of the Chriſtmas-box: to ſay the truth, Peg's lads buſtled pretty hard for that, for, when they were endeavouring to lock it up, they got in their great fists, and pulled out handfuls of half-crowns, shillings, and six-pences. Others in the scramble picked up guineas and broad-pieces. But there happened a worse thing than all this; it was complained that Peg's servants had great stomachs, and brought so many of their friends and acquaintance to the table, that John's family was like to be eat out of house and home. Instead of regulating this matter as it ought to be, Peg's young men were thrust away from the table; then there was the devil and all to do; spoons, plates, and dishes flew about the room like mad: and sir Roger, who was now major domo, had enough to do to quiet them. Peg said, this was contrary to agreement, whereby she was in all things to be treated like a child of the family; then she called upon those, that had made her such fair promises, and undertook for her brother John's good behaviour; but, alas! to her cost she found, that they were the first and readiest to do her the injury. John at last agreed to this regulation, that Peg's * footmen might sit with his book-keeper, journey-men, and apprentices; and Peg's better sort of servants might sit with his footmen, if they pleased.

† By the xvth article of the treaty of Union, it was agreed that Scotland ſhould have an equivalent for ſeveral cuſtoms and exciſes to which ſhe would become liable, and this equivalent was not paid.

Then they began to order plum-porridge and minced-pies for Peg's dinner: Peg told them she had an aversion to that sort of food: that upon forcing † down a mess of it some years ago, it threw her into a fit, till she brought it up again. Some alledged it was

CHAP. VI.

The converſation between John Bull and his wife.

Mrs. Bull. THOUGH our affairs, honey, are in a bad condition, I have a better opinion of them, ſince you ſeemed to be convinced of the ill courſe you have been in, and are reſolved to ſubmit to proper remedies. But when I conſider your immenſe debts, your fooliſh bargains, and the general diſorder of your buſineſs, I have a curioſity to know what fate or chance has brought you into this condition.

J. Bull. I wiſh you would talk of ſome other ſubject; the thoughts of it make me mad; our family muſt have their run.

Mrs. Bull. But ſuch a ſtrange thing as this never happened to any of your family before: they have had law-ſuits, but though they ſpent the income, they never mortgaged the ſtock. Sure you muſt have ſome of the Norman or the Norfolk blood in you. Prithee give me ſome account of theſe matters.

J. Bull. Who could help it? There lives not ſuch a fellow by bread as that old Lewis Baboon: he is the moſt cheating contentious rogue upon the face of the earth. You muſt know, one day, as Nic. Frog and I were over a bottle making up an old quarrel, the old fellow would needs have us drink a bottle of his Cham- pagne, and ſo one after another, till my friend Nic. and I, not being uſed to ſuch heady ſtuff, got bloody drunk. Lewis, all the while, either by the ſtrength of his brain, or flinching his glaſs, kept himſelf as ſober as a judge. "My worthy friends, quoth Lewis, henceforth let us "live neighbourly, I am as peaceable and quiet as a "lamb, of my own temper, but it has been my misfor- "tune to live among quarrelſome neighbours. There "is but one thing can make us fall out, and that is the "inheritance of lord Strutt's eſtate; I am content, for "peace ſake, to wave my right, and ſubmit to any ex- "pedient to prevent a law-ſuit; I think an * equal di- "viſion will be the faireſt way." Well moved, old Lewis, quoth Frog; and I hope my friend John here will not be refractory. At the ſame time he clapped me on the back, and ſlabbered me all over from cheek to cheek, with his great tongue. Do as you pleaſe, gentlemen, quoth I; 'tis all one to John Bull. We agreed to part that night, and next morning to meet at the corner of lord Strutt's park wall with our ſurveying inſtruments, which accordingly we did. Old Lewis carried a chain and a ſemicircle; Nic. paper, rulers, and a lead pencil; and I followed at ſome diſtance with a long pole. We began firſt with ſurveying the meadow grounds, afterwards we meaſured the corn fields, cloſe by cloſe; then we proceeded to the wood lands, the † copper and tin mines. All this while Nic. laid down every thing exactly upon paper, calculated the acres and roods to a great nicety. When we had finiſhed the land, we were going to break into the houſe and gardens to take an inventory of his plate, pictures, and other furniture.

Mrs. Bull. What ſaid lord Strutt to all this?

J. Bull. As we had almoſt finiſhed our concern, we were accoſted by ſome of lord Strutt's ſervants: "Hey day! What's here? What a devil's the mean-"ing of all theſe trangrams and gimcracks, gentle-"men? What in the name of wonder are you going "about, jumping over my maſter's hedges, and run-"ning your lines croſs his grounds? If you are at any "field paſtime, you might have aſked leave, my maſ-"ter is a civil well-bred perſon as any is."

Mrs. Bull. What could you anſwer to this?

J. Bull. Why truly my neighbour Frog and I were ſtill hot-headed; we told him his maſter was an old doating puppy, that minded nothing of his own buſi-neſs; that we were ſurveying his eſtate, and ſettling it for him, ſince he would not do it himſelf. Upon this there happened a quarrel, but we being ſtronger than they, ſent them away with a flea in their ear. They went home and told their maſter ‡: "My lord, ſaid "they, there are three odd ſort of fellows going about "your grounds with the ſtrangeſt machines, that ever "we beheld in our life: I ſuppoſe they are going to "rob your orchard, fell your trees, or drive away your "cattle: they told us ſtrange things of ſettling your "eſtate: one is a luſty old fellow, in a black wig, with a "black beard, without teeth: there's another thick "ſquat fellow, in trunk-hoſe: the third is a little, long-"noſed thin man, (I was then lean, being juſt come " out of a fit of ſickneſs) I ſuppoſe it is fit to ſend after " them, leſt they carry ſomething away."

Mrs. Bull. I fancy this put the old fellow in a rare tweague.

J. Bull. Weak as he was, he called for his long Toledo, ſwore and bounced about the room, "'Sdeath! " what am I come to, to be affronted ſo by my tradeſ- " men? I know the raſcals: my barber, clothier, and " linen-draper diſpoſe of my eſtate! bring hither my " blunderbuſs. I'll warrant ye, you ſhall ſee day-light " though them. Scoundrels! dogs! the ſcum of the " earth! Frog, that was my father's kitchin-boy, he " pretend to meddle with my eſtate! with my will! " Ah poor Strutt, what art thou come to at laſt? " Thou haſt lived too long in the world, to ſee thy age " and infirmity ſo deſpiſed: how will the ghoſts of my " noble anceſtors receive theſe tidings? They cannot, " they muſt not ſleep quietly in their graves." In ſhort, the old gentleman was carried off in a fainting fit, and after bleeding in both arms hardly recovered.

Mrs. Bull. Really this was a very extraordinary way of proceeding: I long to hear the reſt of it.

J. Bull. After we had come back to the tavern, and taken t'other bottle of Champagne, we quarrelled a little about the diviſion of the eſtate. Lewis hauled and pulled the map on one ſide, and Frog and I on the other, till we had like to have torn the parchment to pieces. At laſt Lewis pulled out a pair of great taylors ſheers, and clipt a corner for himſelf, which he ſaid was a manor that lay convenient for him, and left Frog and me the reſt to diſpoſe of as we pleaſed. We were overjoyed to think Lewis was contented with ſo little, not ſmelling what was at the bottom of the plot. There happened indeed an incident, that gave us ſome diſturbance: a cunning fellow, one of my ſervants, two days after peeping through the key-hole obſerved, that old Lewis had ſtole away our part of the map, and ſaw him fidling and turning the map from one corner to the other, trying to join the two pieces together again: he was muttering ſomething to himſelf, which we did not well hear, only theſe words, 'Tis great pity, 'tis great pity! My ſervant added, that he believed this had ſome ill meaning. I told him he was a coxcomb, always pretending to be wiſer than his companions: Lewis and I are good friends, he's an honeſt fellow, and I dare ſay will ſtand to his bargain. The ſequel of the ſtory proved this fellow's ſuſpicion to be too well grounded; for ‖ Lewis revealed our whole ſecret to the deceaſed lord Strutt, who, in reward to his treachery and revenge to Frog and me, ſettled his whole eſtate upon the preſent Philip Baboon. Then we underſtood what he meant by piecing the map.

Mrs. Bull. And was you ſurprized at this? Had not lord Strutt reaſon to be angry? Would you have been contented to have been ſo uſed yourſelf?

J. Bull. Why truly, wife, it was not eaſily reconciled to the common methods; but then it was the faſhion to do ſuch things. I have read of your golden age, your ſilver age, etc. one might juſtly call this the age of lawyers. As the philoſophers ſay, that there is a duplicate of every terreſtrial animal at ſea, ſo it was in this age of the lawyers, there were at leaſt two of every thing; nay, on my conſcience, I think there were three * eſquire Hackums at one time. In ſhort, it was uſual for a parcel of fellows to meet, and diſpoſe of the whole eſtates in the country: This lies convenient for me, Tom: Thou wouldſt do more good with that, Dick, than the old fellow that has it. So to law they went with the true owners; the lawyers got well by it; every body elſe was undone. It was a common thing for an honeſt man, when he came home at night, to find another fellow domineering in his family, hectoring his ſervants, calling for ſupper, and pretending to go to bed to his wife. In every houſe you might obſerve two Soſia's quarrelling who was maſter. For my own part, I am ſtill afraid of the ſame treatment, and that I ſhould find ſomebody behind my counter ſelling my broad cloth.

Mrs. Bull. There are a ſort of fellows, they call banterers and bamboozlers, that play ſuch tricks; but it ſeems, theſe fellows were in earneſt.

J. Bull. I begin to think, that juſtice is a better rule than conveniency, for all ſome people make ſo ſlight on it.

Of the hard ſhifts Mrs. Bull was put to, to preſerve the manor of Bullock's Hatch; with ſir Roger's method to keep off importunate duns †.

AS John Bull and his wife were talking together, they were ſurprized with a ſudden knocking at the door: "Thoſe wicked ſcriveners and lawyers, no "doubt," quoth John; and ſo it was: ſome aſking for the money he owed, and others warning to prepare for the approaching term. "What a curſed life do I lead? "quoth John. Debt is like deadly ſin: for God's "ſake, ſir Roger, get me rid of the fellows." I'll war- "rant you, quoth ſir Roger; leave them to me." And indeed it was pleaſant enough to obſerve ſir Roger's method with theſe importunate duns; his ſincere friend- ſhip for John Bull made him ſubmit to many things for his ſervice, which he would have ſcorned to have done for himſelf. ‡ Sometimes he would ſtand at the door with his long ſtaff to keep off the duns, 'till John got out at the back-door. When the lawyers and tradeſmen brought extravagant bills, ſir Roger uſed to bargain beforehand for leave to cut off a quarter of a yard in any part of the bill he pleaſed; he wore a pair

† After the diſſolution of the parliament, the ſinking miniſtry endeavoured to ſupport themſelves by propagating a notion, that the publick credit would ſuffer if the lord treaſurer Godolphin was removed: the dread of this event produced it: the monied men began to ſell their ſhares in the bank; the governor, deputy governor, and two directors applied to the Queen to prevent the change; the alarm became general, and all the publick funds gradually ſunk. of ſciſſars in his pocket for this purpoſe, and would ſnip it off ſo nicely as you cannot imagine. Like a true goldſmith, he kept all your holidays; here was not one wanting in his calendar: when ready money was ſcarce, he would ſet them a telling a thouſand pounds in ſixpences, groats, and three penny pieces. It would have done your heart good to have ſeen him charge through an army of lawyers, attorneys, clerks, and tradeſmen; ſometimes with ſword in hand, at other times nuzzling like an eel in the mud. When a fellow ſtuck like a bur, that there was no ſhaking him off, he uſed to be mighty inquiſitive about the health of his uncles and aunts in the country; he could call them all by their names, for he knew every body, and could talk to them in their own way. The extremely impertinent he would ſend away to ſee ſome ſtrange ſight, as the dragon of Hockley in the Hole; or bid him call the 30th of next February. ‖ Now and then you would ſee him in the kitchen, weighing the beef and butter; paying ready money, that the maids might not run a tick at the market, and the butchers, by bribing of them, ſell damaged and light meat. Another time he would ſlip into the cellar, and gauge the caſks. In his leiſure minutes he was poſting his books, and gathering in his debts. Such frugal methods were neceſſary, where money was ſcarce, and duns ſo numerous. All this while John kept his credit, could ſhew his head both at 'Change and Weſtminſter-hall; no man proteſted his bill, nor refuſed his bond: only the ſharpers and the ſcriveners, the lawyers and other clerks pelted ſir Roger as he went along. The ſquirters were at it with their kennel water, for they were mad for the loſs of their bubble, and that they could not get him to mortgage the manor of Bullock's Hatch. Sir Roger ſhook his ears, and nuzzled along well ſatisfied within himſelf, that he was doing a charitable work in reſcuing an honeſt man from the claws of harpies and blood-ſuckers. Mrs. Bull did all that an affectionate wife and a good houſewife could do; yet the boundaries of virtues are indiviſible lines; it is impoſſible to march up cloſe to the frontiers of frugality, without entering the territories of parſimony. Your good houſewifes are apt to look into the minuteſt things; * therefore ſome blamed Mrs. Bull for new heel-piecing of her ſhoes, grudging a quarter of a pound of ſoap and ſand to ſcowre the rooms; but eſpecially, † that ſhe would not allow her maids and apprentices the benefit of John Bunyan, the London apprentices, or the Seven champions in the black-letter.

Mrs. Bull. IT is a moſt ſad life we lead, my dear, to be ſo teazed, paying intereſt for old debts, and ſtill contracting new ones. However, I don't blame you for vindicating your honour, and chaſtizing old Lewis: to curb the inſolent, protect the oppreſſed, recover one's own, and defend what one has, are good effects of the law: the only thing I want to know, is, how you came to make an end of your money, before you finiſhed your ſuit.

to

John Bull. I was told by the learned in the law, that my ſuit ſtood upon three firm pillars; more money for more law, more law for more money, and no compoſition. More money for more law was plain to a demonſtration, for who can go to law without money? and it was plain, that any man that has money, may have law for it. The third was as evident as the other two; for what compoſition could be made with a rogue, that never kept a word he ſaid?

Mrs. Bull. I think you are moſt likely to get out of this labyrinth by the ſecond door, by want of ready money to purchaſe this precious commodity: but you ſeem not only to have bought too much of it, but have paid too dear for what you bought; elſe how was it poſſible to run ſo much in debt, when, at this very time, the yearly income of what is mortgaged to thoſe uſurers would diſcharge Hocus's bill, and give you your belly-full of law for all your life, without running one ſixpence in debt? You have been bred up to buſineſs; I ſuppoſe you can cypher: I wonder you never uſed your pen and ink.

John Bull. Now you urge me too far; prithee, dear wife, hold thy tongue. Suppoſe a young heir, heedleſs, raw, and unexperienced, full of ſpirit and vigour, with a favourite paſſion, in the hands of money ſcriveners: ſuch fellows are like your wire-drawing mills; if they get hold of a man's finger, they will pull in his whole body at laſt, 'till they ſqueeze the heart, blood, and guts out of him. † When I wanted money, half a dozen of theſe fellows were always waiting in my antichamber with their ſecurities ready drawn. I was tempted with the ready, ſome farm or other went to pot. I received with one hand, and paid it away with the other to lawyers, that like ſo many hell-hounds were ready to devour me. Then the rogues would plead poverty, and ſcarcity of money, which always ended in receiving ninety for the hundred. After they had got poſſeſſion of my beſt rents, they were able to ſupply me with my own money. But what was worſe, when I looked into the ſecurities, there was no clauſe of redemption.

Mrs. Bull. No clauſe of redemption ſay you? that's hard.

John Bull. No great matter, for I cannot pay them. They had got a worſe trick than that; the ſame man bought and ſold to himſelf, paid the money, and gave the acquittance; the ſame man was butcher and graſier, brewer and butler, cook and poulterer. There is ſomething ſtill worſe than all this; there came twenty bills upon me at once, which I had given money to diſcharge; I was like to be pulled to pieces by brewer, butcher, and baker; even my herb-woman dunned me as I went along the ſtreet. (Thanks to my friend ſir Roger, elſe I muſt have gone to gaol.) When I aſked the meaning of this, I was told, the money went to the lawyers; counſel won't tick, ſir; Hocus was urging: my book-keeper ſat ſotting all day, playing at put and all-fours: in ſhort, by griping uſurers, devouring lawyers, and negligent ſervants, I am brought to this paſs.

Mrs.

Mrs. Bull. This was hard uſage! but methinks, the leaſt reflection might have retrieved you.

John Bull. It is true: yet conſider my circumſtances; my honour was engaged, and I did not know how to get out; beſides, I was for five years often drunk, always muddled; they carried me from tavern to tavern, to ale-houſes and brandy-ſhops, and brought me acquainted with ſuch ſtrange dogs! * "There "goes the prettieſt fellow in the world, ſays one, for "managing a jury; make him yours. There's ano-"ther can pick you up witneſſes: ſerjeant ſuch-a-one "has a ſilver tongue at the bar." I believe, in time I ſhould have retained every ſingle perſon within the inns of courts. The night after a trial I treated the lawyers, their wives and daughters, with fiddles, hautboys, drums, and trumpets. I was always hot-headed; then they placed me in the middle, their attornies and their clerks dancing about me, whooping, and hollowing, Long live John Bull, the glory and ſupport of the law!

Mrs. Bull. Really, huſband, you went through a very notable courſe.

John Bull. One of the things, that firſt alarmed me, was || that they ſhewed a ſpite againſt my poor old mother. "Lord quoth I, what makes you ſo jealous of "a poor, old innocent gentlewoman, that minds only "her prayers, and her practice of piety: ſhe never "meddles in any of your concerns?" About this time the old gentlewoman fell ill of an § odd ſort of a diſtemper ; it began with a coldneſs and numbneſs in her limbs, which by degrees affected the nerves, (I think the phyſicians call them) ſeized the brain, and at laſt ended in a lethargy. It betrayed itſelf at firſt in a ſort of indifference and careleſſneſs in all her actions, coldneſs to her beſt friends, and an averſion to ſtir or go about the common offices of life. She, that was the cleanlieſt creature in the world, never ſhrunk now, if you ſet a cloſe-ſtool under her noſe. She, that would ſometimes rattle off her ſervants pretty ſharply, now, if ſhe ſaw them drink, or heard them talk profanely, never took any notice of it. * Inſtead of her uſual charities to deſerving perſons, ſhe threw away her money upon roaring ſwearing bullies and beggars, that went about the ſtreets. Phyſicians were ſent for in haſte: Sir Roger, with great difficulty, brought Ratcliff; Garth came upon the firſt meſſage. There were ſeveral others called in; but, as uſual upon ſuch occaſions, they differed ſtrangely at the conſultation. At laſt they divided into two parties, one ſided with Garth, the other with Ratcliff. ‖ Dr. Garth, "This caſe ſeems to me "to be plainly hyſterical; the old woman is whim-"ſical; it is a common thing for your old women to "be ſo; I'll pawn my life, bliſters, with the ſteel diet, "will recover her." Others ſuggeſted ſtrong purging, and letting of blood, becauſe ſhe was plethorick. " In no manner of danger, I " vow to Gad, quoth Garth, the old woman is hyſteri- " cal, fanciful, Sir, I vow to Gad." " I tell you, Sir, ſays " Ratcliff, ſhe cannot live three days to an end, unleſs " there is ſome very effectual courſe taken with her; " ſhe has a malignant fever." Then fool, puppy, and blockhead were the beſt words they gave. I could hardly reſtrain them from throwing the ink-bottles at one another's heads. I forgot to tell you, that one party of the phyſicians deſired, I would take my ſiſter Peg into the houſe to nurſe her, but the old gentlewoman would not hear of that. At laſt one phyſician aſked, if the lady had ever been uſed to take Laudanum? Her maid anſwered, not that ſhe knew; but indeed there was a High German Liveryman of hers, one § Yan Ptſchirnſooker, that gave her a ſort of quack-powder. The phyſician deſired to ſee it: " Nay, ſays he, there " is Opium in this, I am ſure."

Mrs. Bull. I hope you examined a little into this matter.

John Bull. I did indeed, and I diſcovered a great myſtery of iniquity. The witneſſes made oath, That they had heard ſome of the * Livery-men frequently railing at their miſtreſs. " They ſaid, ſhe was a trouble- " ſome fiddle-faddle old woman, and ſo ceremonious, " that there was no bearing of her. They were ſo

Such diſcourſes were often overheard among the Livery-men, while the ſaid Yan Ptſchirnſooker had undertook this matter. A maid made affidavit, " That ſhe had ſeen the ſaid Yan Ptſchirnſooker, one of " the Livery-men, frequently making up of medicines, " and adminiſtring them to all the neighbours; that " ſhe ſaw him one morning make up the powder, " which her miſtreſs took; that ſhe had the curioſity " to aſk him, whence he had the ingredients? They " come, ſays he, from ſeveral parts of de world; dis I " have from Geneva, dat from Rome, this white powder " from Amſterdam, and the red from Edinburgh; but " the chief ingredient of all comes from Turkey." It was likewiſe proved, that the ſaid Yan Ptſchirnſooker had been frequently ſeen at the Roſe with Jack, who was known to bear an inveterate ſpite to his miſtreſs: That he brought a certain powder to his miſtreſs, which the examinant believes to be the ſame, and ſpoke the following words: " Madam, here is grand ſecret " van de world, my ſweetening powder, it does tem- " perate de humour, deſpel the windt, and cure de va- " pour; it lulleth and quieteth the animal ſpirits, pro-

Of ſome extraordinary * things, that paſſed at the Salutation tavern, in the conference between Bull, Frog, Eſquire South, and Lewis Baboon.

FROG had given his word, that he would meet the above-mentioned company at the Salutation to talk of this agreement. Though he durſt not directly break his appointment, he made many a ſhuffling excuſe; one time he pretended to be ſeized with the gout in his right knee; then he got a great cold, that had ſtruck him deaf of one ear; afterwards two of his coach-horſes fell ſick, and he durſt not go by water for fear of catching an ague. John would take no excuſe, but hurried him away: "Come, Nic. ſays he, let's go "and hear at leaſt what this old fellow has to propoſe! "I hope there's no hurt in that. Be it ſo, quoth "Nic. but if I catch any harm, woe be to you; my "wife and children will curſe you as long as they live." When they were come to the Salutation, John concluded all was ſure then, and that he ſhould be troubled no more with law affairs; he thought every body as plain and ſincere as he was. "Well neighbours, quoth he, "let's now make an end of all matters, and live peaceably together for the time to come; if every body is "as well inclined as I, we ſhall quickly come to the "upſhot of our affair." And ſo pointing to Frog to ſay ſomething, to the great ſurprize of all the company,

* The treaty of Utrecht: the difficulty to get them to meet. When met, the Dutch would not ſpeak their ſentiments, nor the French deliver in their propoſals. The houſe of Auſtria talked very high.

Frog

Frog was ſeized with a dead palſy in the tongue. John began to aſk him ſome plain queſtions, and whooped and hallowed in his ear. "Let's come to the point, "Nic! Who wouldeſt thou have to be Lord Strutt? "Wouldeſt thou have Philip Baboon?" Nic. ſhook his head, and ſaid nothing. "Wilt thou then have "Eſquire South to be Lord Strutt?" Nic. ſhook his head a ſecond time. "Then who the devil wilt thou "have? ſay ſomething or another." Nic. opened his mouth and pointed to his tongue, and cried, "A, a, "a, a!" which was as much as to ſay, he could not ſpeak. John Bull.] "Shall I ſerve Philip Baboon with "broad-cloth, and accept of the compoſition that "he offers, with the liberty of his parks and fiſh-"ponds?" Then Nic. roared like a bull, O, o, o, o!" John Bull.] "If thou wilt not let me have them, wilt "thou take them thyſelf?" Then Nic. grinned, cackled, and laughed, till he was like to kill himſelf, and ſeemed to be ſo pleaſed, that he fell a friſking and dancing about the room. John Bull.] "Shall I leave all "this matter to thy management, Nic. and go about "my buſineſs?" Then Nic. got up a glaſs, and drank to John, ſhaking him by the hand, till he had like to have ſhook his ſhoulder out of joint. John Bull.] "I "underſtand thee, Nic. but I ſhall make thee ſpeak "before I go." Then Nic. put his finger in his cheek, and made it cry Buck; which was as much as to ſay, I care not a farthing for thee. John Bull.] "I have "done, Nic. if thou wilt not ſpeak, I'll make my own "terms with old Lewis here." Then Nic. lolled out his tongue, and turned up his bum to him; which was as much as to ſay, Kiſs.——

John perceiving that Frog would not ſpeak, turns to old Lewis: "Since we cannot make this obſtinate fel-"low ſpeak, Lewis, pray condeſcend a little to his hu-"mour, and ſet down thy meaning upon paper, that "he may anſwer it in another ſcrap.

"I am infinitely ſorry, quoth Lewis, that it happens ſo "unfortunately; for playing a little at cudgels t'other "day, a fellow has given me ſuch a rap over the right-"arm, that I am quite lame: I have loſt the uſe of my "fore-finger and my thumb, ſo that I cannot hold my "pen.

John Bull. "That's all one, let me write for "you.

Lewis. "But I have a misfortune, that I cannot "read any body's hand but my own.

John Bull. "Try what you can do with your left-"hand.

Lewis. "That's impoſſible; it will make ſuch a "ſcrawl, that it will not be legible.

What! covered in my preſence? I'll cruſh "your ſouls, and crack you like lice!" With that he had like to have ſtruck John Bull's hat into the fire; but John, who was pretty ſtrong-fiſted, gave him ſuch a ſqueeze as made his eyes water. He went on ſtill in his mad pranks; "When I am Lord of the Univerſe,

" John Bull, ſhalt be my fool."

All this while Frog laughed in his ſleeve, gave the Eſquire t'other noggan of brandy, and clapped him on the back, which made him ten times madder.

Poor John ſtood in amaze, talking thus to himſelf: " Well John, thou art got into rare company! One has " a dumb devil, t'other a mad devil, and the third a " ſpirit of infirmity. An honeſt man has a fine time " on't among ſuch rogues. What art thou aſking of " them, after all? Some mighty boon one would " think! only to ſit quietly at thy own fire-ſide. Would " to God I lived a thouſand leagues off them! but the " devil's in't, John Bull is in, and John Bull muſt get " out as well as he can."

As he was talking to himſelf, he obſerved Frog and old Lewis edging * towards one another to whiſper; ſo that John was forced to ſit with his arms a-kimbo, to keep them aſunder.

Some people adviſed John to blood Frog under the tongue, or take away his bread and butter, which would certainly make him ſpeak; to give Eſquire South hellebore; as for Lewis, ſome were for emollient pulteſſes, others for opening his arm with an inciſion-knife.

The apprehending, examination, and impriſonment of Jack for ſuſpicion of poiſoning.

THE attentive reader cannot have forgot, that the ſtory of Yan Ptſchirnſooker's powder was interrupted by a meſſage from Frog. I have a natural compaſſion for curioſity, being much troubled with the diſtemper myſelf; therefore to gratify that uneaſy itching ſenſation in my reader, I have procured the following account of that matter.

Yan Ptſchirnſooker came off (as rogues uſually do upon ſuch occaſions) by peaching his partner; and, being extremely forward to bring him to the gallows, † Jack was accuſed as the contriver of all the roguery. And indeed it happened unfortunately for the poor fellow, that he was known to bear a moſt inveterate ſpight againſt the old gentlewoman; and conſequently, that never any ill accident happened to her, but he was ſuſpected to be at the bottom of it. If ſhe

* The receiving the holy ſacrament as adminiſtred by the church of England once at leaſt in every year, having been made a neceſſary qualification for places of truſt and profit, many of the Diſſenters came to the altar merely for this purpoſe. A bill to prevent this practice had been three times brought into the houſe and rejected, under the title of A bill to prevent occaſional conformity. But the Earl of Nottingham having brought it in a fourth time under another name, and with the addition of ſuch clauſes as were ſaid to enlarge the toleration, and to be a further ſecurity to the Proteſtant ſucceſſion, the Whigs, whoſe cauſe the Earl then appeared to eſpouſe, were perſuaded to concur; ſome, becauſe they were indeed willing that the bill ſhould paſs, and others, becauſe they believed the Earl of Oxford would at laſt procure it to be thrown out. The four following chapters contain the hiſtory of this tranſaction.

pricked her finger, Jack, to be ſure, laid the pin in the way: if ſome noiſe in the ſtreet diſturbed her reſt, who could it be but Jack in ſome of his nocturnal rambles? If a ſervant ran away, Jack had debauched him: every idle tittle-tattle that went about, Jack was always ſuſpected for the author of it: however, all was nothing to this laſt affair of the temperating, moderating powder.

The hue and cry went after Jack to apprehend him dead or alive, where-ever he could be found. The conſtables looked out for him in all his uſual haunts; but to no purpoſe. Where d'ye think they found him at laſt? Even ſmoaking his pipe very quietly at his brother Martin's; from whence he was carried with a vaſt mob at his heels before the worſhipful Mr. juſtice Overdo. Several of his neighbours made oath, * that of late the priſoner had been obſerved to lead a very diſſolute life, renouncing even his uſual hypocriſy, and pretences to ſobriety: that he frequented taverns and eating-houſes, and had been often guilty of drunkenneſs and gluttony at my lord-mayor's table: that he had been ſeen in the company of lewd women: that he had transferred his uſual care of the engroſſed copy of his father's will, to bank bills, orders for tallies, and debentures †: theſe he now affirmed, with more literal truth, to be ‡ meat, drink, and cloth, the philoſopher's ſtone, and the univerſal medicine: that he was ſo far from ſhewing his cuſtomary reverence to the

In ſhort, that he was grown a mere rake: and had nothing left in him of old Jack, except his ſpight to John Bull's mother.

Another witneſs made oath, That Jack had been overheard bragging of a ‡ trick he had found out to manage the old formal jade, as he uſed to call her. "Damn this numb-ſkull of mine, quoth he, that "I could not light on it ſooner. ‖ Two witneſſes ſwore, that ſeveral years ago, there came to their miſtreſs's door a young fellow in a tattered coat, that went by the name of Timothy Trim, whom they did in their conſcience believe to be the very priſoner, reſembling him in ſhape, ſtature, and the features of his countenance: that the ſaid Timothy Trim being taken into the family, clapped their miſtreſs's livery over his own tattered coat: that the ſaid Timothy was extremely officious about their miſtreſs's perſon, endeavouring by flattery and tale-bearing to ſet her againſt the reſt of the ſervants: no-body was ſo ready to fetch any thing that was wanted, to reach what was dropt: that he uſed to ſhove and elbow his fellow-ſervants to get near his miſtreſs, eſpecially when money was a paying or receiving; then he was never out of the way: that he was extremely diligent about every body's buſineſs, but his own: that the ſaid Timothy, while he was in the family, uſed to be playing roguiſh tricks; when his miſtreſs's back was turned, he would loll out his tongue, make mouths, and laugh at her, walking behind her like Harlequin, ridiculing her motions and geſtures; but if his miſtreſs looked about, he put on a grave, demure countenance, as if he had been in a fit of devotion: that he uſed often to trip up ſtairs ſo ſmoothly, that you could not hear him tread, and put all things out of order: that he would pinch the children and ſervants, when he met them in the dark, ſo hard, that he left the print of his fore-finger and his thumb in black and blue, and then ſlink into a corner, as if no-body had done it: out of the ſame malicious deſign he uſed to lay chairs and joint-ſtools in their way, that they might break their noſes by falling over them: the more young and unexperienced he uſed to teach to talk ſaucily, and call names: during his ſtay in the family, there was much plate miſſing: being catched

with a couple of ſilver ſpoons in his pocket, with their handles wrenched off, he ſaid, he was only going to carry them to the goldſmith's to be mended; that the ſaid Timothy was hated by all the honeſt ſervants for his ill-conditioned, ſplenetick tricks, but eſpecially for his ſlanderous tongue; traducing them to their miſtreſs, as drunkards, thieves, and whoremaſters: that the ſaid Timothy by lying ſtories uſed to ſet all the family together by the ears, taking delight to make them fight and quarrel: * particularly one day ſitting at table, he ſpoke words to this effect: "I am of opinion, quoth he, that little ſhort fellows, "ſuch as we are, have better hearts, and could beat "the tall fellows? I wiſh it came to a fair trial; I "believe theſe long fellows, as ſightly as they are, "ſhould find their jackets well thwacked."

A parcel of tall fellows, who thought themſelves affronted by the diſcourſe, took up the quarrel, and to't they went, the tall men and the low men, which continues ſtill a faction in the family to the great diſorder of our miſtreſs's affairs: the ſaid Timothy carried this frolick ſo far, that he propoſed to his miſtreſs, that ſhe ſhould entertain no ſervant, that was above four feet ſeven inches high; and for that purpoſe had prepared a gage, by which they were to be meaſured. The good old gentlewoman was not ſo ſimple, as to go into his project; ſhe began to ſmell a rat. "This Tim, quoth ſhe, is an odd ſort "of a fellow; methinks he makes a ſtrange figure "with that ragged, tattered coat, appearing under

The witneſſes farther made oath, that the ſaid Timothy lay out a-nights, and went abroad often at unſeaſonable hours ; and it was credibly reported, he did buſineſs in another family : that he pretended to have a ſqueamiſh ſtomach, and could not eat at table with the reſt of the ſervants, though this was but a pretence to provide ſome nice bit for himſelf ; that he refuſed to dine upon ſalt-fiſh, only to have an opportunity to eat a calf's head (his favourite diſh) in private ; that for all his tender ſtomach, when he was got by himſelf, he could devour capons, turkeys, and ſirloins of beef, like a cormorant.

Two other witneſſes gave the following evidence : That in his officious attendance upon his miſtreſs, he had tried to ſlip a powder into her drink : and that he was once catched endeavouring to ſtifle her with a pillow as ſhe was aſleep : that he and Ptſchirnſooker were often in cloſe conference, and that they uſed to drink together at the Roſe, where it ſeems he was well enough known by his true name of Jack.

The priſoner had little to ſay in his defence ; he endeavoured to prove himſelf Alibi ; ſo that the trial upon this ſingle queſtion, whether the ſaid Timothy Trim and Jack were the ſame perſon ; which was proved by ſuch plain tokens and particularly by a mole mole under the left pap, that there was no withſtanding the evidence; therefore the worſhipful Mr. Juſtice committed him, in order to his trial.

CHAP. XII.

How Jack's friends came to viſit him in priſon, and what advice they gave him.

JACK hitherto had paſſed in the world for a poor, ſimple, well-meaning, half witted, crack-brained fellow. People were ſtrangely ſurprized to find him in ſuch a roguery; that he ſhould diſguiſe himſelf under a falſe name, hire himſelf out for a ſervant to an old gentlewoman, only for an opportunity to poiſon her. They ſaid, that it was more generous to profeſs open enmity, than under a profound diſſimulation to be guilty of ſuch a ſcandalous breach of truſt, and of the ſacred rights of hoſpitality. In ſhort, the action was univerſally condemned by his beſt friends; they told him in plain terms, that this was come as a judgment upon him for his looſe life, his gluttony, drunkenneſs, and avarice, for laying aſide his father's will in an old mouldy trunk, and turning ſtock-jobber, news-monger, and buſy-body, meddling with other people's affairs, ſhaking off his old ſerious friends, and keeping company with buffoons and pick-pockets, his father's ſworn enemies: that he had beſt throw himſelf upon the mercy of the court; repent and change his manners. To ſay truth, Jack heard theſe diſcourſes with ſome compunction; however, he reſolved to try what his new acquain-quaintance would do for him: they ſent † Habbakkuk Slyboots, who delivered him the following meſſage, as the peremptory commands of his truſty companions.

Habbakkuk. Dear Jack, I am ſorry, for thy miſfortune: matters have not been carried on with due ſecrecy; however we muſt make the beſt of a bad bargain: thou art in the utmoſt jeopardy, that's certain: hang, draw, and quarter, are the gentleſt things they talk of. However, thy faithful friends, ever watchful for thy ſecurity, bid me tell thee, that they have one infallible expedient left to ſave thy life: thou muſt know, we have got into ſome underſtanding with the enemy, by the means of Don Diego; he aſſures us there is no mercy for thee, and that there is only one way left to eſcape; it is indeed ſomewhat out of the common road; however, be aſſured it is the reſult of moſt mature deliberation.

Jack. Prithee tell me quickly, for my heart is ſunk down into the very bottom of my belly.

Hab. It is the unanimous opinion of your friends, that you † make as if you hanged yourſelf; they will give it out that you are quite dead, and convey your body out of priſon in a bier; and John Bull, being buſied with his law-ſuit, will not enquire further into the matter.

Jack. How d'ye mean, make as if I hanged myſelf?

† Conſent to the bill againſt occaſional conformity.

Hab.

Hab. Nay, you muſt really hang yourſelf up, in a true genuine rope, that there may appear no trick in it, and leave the reſt to your friends.

Jack. Truly this is a matter of ſome concern; and my friends, I hope, won't take it ill, if I enquire a little into the means by which they intend to deliver me: a rope and a nooſe are no jeſting matters!

Hab. Why ſo miſtruſtful? haſt thou ever found us falſe to thee? I tell thee, there is one ready to cut thee down.

Jack. May I preſume to aſk who it is, that is entruſted with ſo important an office?

Hab. Is there no end of thy how's and thy why's? That's a ſecret.

Jack. A ſecret, perhaps, that I may be ſafely truſted with, for I am not like to tell it again. I tell you plainly, it is no ſtrange thing for a man, before he hangs himſelf up, to enquire who is to cut him down.

Hab. Thou ſuſpicious creature! If thou muſt needs know it, I tell thee it is * Sir Roger: he has been in tears ever ſince thy misfortune. Don Diego and we have laid it ſo, that he is to be in the next room, and before the rope is well about thy neck, reſt ſatisfied, he will break in and cut thee down; fear not, old boy; we'll do it, I'll warrant thee.

Jack. So I muſt hang myſelf up, upon hopes Sir Roger will cut me down, and all this upon the credit of Don Diego: a fine ſtratagem indeed to ſave my life, that depends upon hanging, Don Diego, and Sir Roger.

Hab. I tell thee there is a myſtery in all this, my friend, a piece of profound policy; if thou kneweſt what good this will do to the common cauſe, thy heart would leap for joy: I am ſure thou wouldſt not delay the experiment one moment.

Jack. This is to the tune of All for the better. What's your cauſe to me, when I am hanged?

Hab. Refractory mortal! If thou wilt not truſt thy friends, take what follows; know aſſuredly, before next full-moon, that thou wilt be hung up in chains, or thy quarters perching upon the moſt conſpicuous places of the kingdom. Nay, I don't believe they will be contented with hanging; they talk of empaling, or breaking on the wheel; and thou chuſeſt that, before a gentle ſuſpending of thyſelf for one minute. Hanging is not ſo painful a thing as thou imagineſt. I have ſpoke with ſeveral, that have undergone it; they all agree it is no manner of uneaſineſs: be ſure thou take good notice of the ſymptoms, the relation will be curious. It is but a kick or two with thy heels, and a wry mouth or ſo: Sir Roger will be with thee in the twinkling of an eye.

Jack. But what if Sir Roger ſhould not come; will my friends be there to ſuccour me?

Hab. Doubt it not; I will provide every thing againſt to-morrow morning: do thou keep thy own ſecret; ſay nothing: I tell thee, it is abſolutely neceſſary for the common good, that thou ſhouldſt go through this operation.

JACK was a profeſſed enemy to implicit faith, and yet I dare ſay it was never more ſtrongly exerted, nor more baſely abuſed, than upon this occaſion. He was now with his old friends, in the ſtate of a poor diſbanded officer after a peace, or rather a wounded ſoldier after a battle; like an old favourite of a cunning miniſter, after the job is over; or a decayed beauty to a cloyed lover in queſt of new game; or like a hundred ſuch things, that one ſees every day. There were new intrigues, new views, new projects on foot; * Jack's life was the purchaſe of Diego's friendſhip, much good may it do them. The intereſt of Hocus and Sir William Crawley, which was now more at heart, made this operation upon poor Jack abſolutely neceſſary. You may eaſily gueſs, that his reſt that night was but ſmall, and much diſturbed; however, the remaining part of his time he did not employ (as his cuſtom was formerly) in prayer, meditation, or ſinging a double verſe of a pſalm; but amuſed himſelf with diſpoſing of his bank ſtock. Many a doubt, many a qualm, overſpread his clouded imagination: "Muſt I then," quoth he, "hang up my own perſo-" nal, natural, individual ſelf, with theſe two hands! " Durus Sermo! What if I ſhould be cut down, as

* The Earl of Nottingham made the concurrence of the Whigs to bring in and carry this bill one of the conditions of his engaging in their cauſe.

" my

" my friends tell me? There is ſomething infamous " in the very attempt; the world will conclude, I " had a guilty conſcience. Is it poſſible that good " man, Sir Roger, can have ſo much pity upon an " unfortunate ſcoundrel, that has perſecuted him ſo " many years? No, it cannot be; I don't love fa- " vours that paſs through Don Diego's hands. On " the other ſide, my blood chills about my heart at " the thought of theſe rogues, with their bloody hands " grabbling in my guts, and pulling out my very en- " trails: hang it, for once I'll truſt my friends." So Jack reſolved; but he had done more wiſely to have put himſelf upon the trial of his country, and made his defence in form; many things happen between the cup and the lip; witneſſes might have been bribed, juries managed, or proſecution ſtopped. But ſo it was, Jack for this time had a ſufficient ſtock of implicit faith, which led him to his ruin, as the ſequel of the ſtory ſhews.

And now the fatal day was come, in which he was to try this hanging experiment. His friends did not fail him at the appointed hour to ſee it put in practice. Habbakkuk brought him a ſmooth, ſtrong, tough rope, made of many a ply of wholeſome Scandinavian hemp, compactly twiſted together, with a nooſe that ſlipt as glib as a bird-catcher's gin. Jack ſhrunk and grew pale at firſt ſight of it; he handled it, he meaſured it, ſtretched it, fixed it againſt the iron bar of the window to try its ſtrength; but no familiarity could reconcile him to it. He found fault with the length, the thickneſs, and the twiſt; nay, the very colour did not pleaſe him. " Will nothing leſs than hanging ſerve,

" quoth Jack, won't my enemies take bail for my good " behaviour? Will they accept of a fine, or be ſatiſ- " fied with the pillory and impriſonment, a good " round whipping, or burning in the cheek?"

Hab. Nothing but your blood will appeaſe their rage; make haſte, elſe we ſhall be diſcovered. There's nothing like ſurprizing the rogues: how they will be diſappointed, when they hear that thou haſt prevented their revenge, and hanged thine own ſelf?

Jack. That's true; but what if I ſhould do it in effigies? Is there never an old Pope or Pretender to hang up in my ſtead? we are not ſo unlike but it may paſs.

Hab. That can never be put upon Sir Roger.

Jack. Are you ſure he is in the next room? Have you provided a very ſharp knife, in caſe of the worſt?

Hab. Doſt take me for a common lyar; be ſatiſfied, no damage can happen to your perſon; your friends will take care of that.

Jack. Mayn't I quilt my rope? It galls my neck ſtrangely: beſides, I don't like this running knot, it holds too tight; I may be ſtifled all of a ſudden.

Hab. Thou haſt ſo many if's and and's; prithee diſpatch; it might have been over before this time.

Jack. But, now I think on't, I would fain ſettle ſome affairs, for fear of the worſt: have a little patience.

Hab. There's no having patience, thou art ſuch a faintling, ſilly creature.

Jack. O thou moſt deteſtable, abominable paſſive obedience! did I ever imagine I ſhould become thy votary tary in ſo pregnant an inſtance! How will my brother Martin laugh at this ſtory, to ſee himſelf outdone in his own calling? He has taken the doctrine, and left me the practice.

No ſooner had he uttered theſe words, but, like a man of true courage, he tied the fatal cord to the beam, fitted the nooſe, and mounted upon the bottom of a tub, the inſide of which he had often graced in his proſperous days. This footſtool Habbakkuk kicked away, and left poor Jack ſwinging, like the pendulum of Paul's clock. The fatal nooſe performed its office, and with the moſt ſtrict ligature ſqueezed the blood into his face, till it aſſumed a purple dye. While the poor man heaved from the very bottom of his belly for breath, Habbakkuk walked with great deliberation into both the upper and lower room to acquaint his friends, who received the news with great temper, and with jeers and ſcoffs inſtead of pity. "Jack has hanged "himſelf, quoth they! let us go and ſee how the poor "rogue ſwings." Then they called Sir Roger. "Sir "Roger, quoth Habbakkuk, Jack has hanged himſelf, "make haſte and cut him down." Sir Roger turned firſt one ear, and then t'other, not underſtanding what he ſaid.

Hab. I tell you, Jack has hanged himſelf up.

Sir Roger. Who's hanged?

Hab. Jack.

Sir Roger. I thought this had not been hanging day.

Hab. But the poor fellow has hanged himſelf.

Sir Roger. Then let him hang. I don't wonder at it, the fellow has been mad theſe twenty years. With this he ſlunk away.

Then Jack's friends began to hunch and puſh one another, "Why don't you go, and cut the "poor fellow down? Why don't you? And why "don't you? Not I, quoth one; Not I, quoth "another; Not I, quoth a third; he may hang "till doomſday before I relieve him." Nay, it is credibly reported, that they were ſo far from ſuccouring their poor friend in this diſmal circumſtance, that Ptſchirnſooker and ſeveral of his companions went in and pulled him by the legs, and thumped him on the breaſt. Then they began to rail at him for the very thing, which they had adviſed and juſtified before, viz. his getting into the old gentlewoman's family, and putting on her livery. The keeper, who performed the laſt office, coming up, found Jack ſwinging with no life in him; he took down the body gently, and laid it on a bulk, and brought out the rope to the company. "This, gentlemen, is the rope that hanged Jack; "what muſt be done with it?" Upon which they ordered it to be laid among the curioſities * of Greſham-college, and it is called Jack's rope to this very day. However, Jack after all had ſome ſmall tokens of life in him, but lies at this time paſt hope of a total recovery, with his head hanging on one ſhoulder, without ſpeech or motion. The coroner's inqueſt, ſuppoſing him to be dead, brought him in Non Compos.

CHAP. XIV.

The conference between Don Diego and John Bull.

DURING the time of the foregoing tranſactions, Don Diego was entertaining John Bull.

D. Diego. I hope, Sir, this day's proceeding will convince you of the ſincerity of your old friend Diego, and the treachery of Sir Roger.

J. Bull. What's the matter now?

D. Diego. You have been endeavouring for ſeveral years to have juſtice done upon that rogue Jack; but what through the remiſſneſs of conſtables, juſtices, and packed juries, he has always found the means to eſcape.

J. Bull. What then?

D. Diego. Conſider then, who is your beſt friend; he that would have brought him to condign puniſhment, or he that has ſaved him. By my perſuaſion Jack had hanged himſelf, if Sir Roger had not cut him down.

J. Bull. Who told you that Sir Roger has done ſo?

D. Diego. You ſeem to receive me coldly; methinks my ſervices deſerve a better return.

J. Bull. Since you value yourſelf upon hanging this poor ſcoundrel, I tell you, when I have any more hanging-work, I'll ſend for thee: I have ſome better employment for Sir Roger: In the mean time, I deſire the poor fellow may be looked after. When he firſt came out of the North country into my family, under the pretended name of Timothy Trim, the fellow ſeemed to mind his loom and his ſpinning-wheel, till ſomebody turned his head; then he grew ſo pragmatical, that he took upon him the government of my whole family: I could never order any thing within or without doors, but he muſt be always giving his counſel, forſooth: nevertheleſs, tell him, I will forgive what is paſt; and, if he would mind his buſineſs for the future, and not meddle out of his own ſphere, he will find, that John Bull is not of a cruel diſpoſition.

D. Diego. Yet all your ſkilful phyſicians ſay, that nothing can recover your mother, but a piece of Jack's liver boiled in her ſoup.

J. Bull. Thoſe are quacks: my mother abhors ſuch Cannibal's food: ſhe is in perfect health at preſent: I would have given many a good pound to have had her ſo well ſome time ago. * There are indeed two or three troubleſome old nurſes, that, becauſe they believe I am tender-hearted, will never let me have a quiet night's reſt with knocking me up: "Oh, Sir, "your mother is taken extremely ill! ſhe is fallen "into a fainting fit! ſhe has a great emptineſs, wants "ſuſtenance!" This is only to recommend themſelves for their great care: John Bull, as ſimple as he is, underſtands a little of a pulſe.

The ſequel of the meeting at the † Salutation.

means now and then to ſteal a whiſper, and by a cleanly conveyance under the table to ſlip a ſhort note into Lewis's hand; which Lewis as ſlily put into John's pocket, with a pinch or a jog, to warn him what he was about. John had the curioſity to retire into a corner to peruſe theſe * billet-doux of Nic's; wherein he found, that Nic. had uſed great freedoms both with his intereſt and reputation. One contained theſe words: "Dear Lewis, Thou ſeeſt clearly, that this block-"head can never bring his matters to bear: let thee "and me talk to-night by ourſelves at the Roſe, and "I'll give thee ſatisfaction." Another was thus expreſſed: "Friend Lewis, Has thy ſenſe quite forſaken "thee, to make Bull ſuch offers? Hold faſt, part with "nothing, and I will give thee a better bargain, I'll "warrant thee."

In ſome of his billets he told Lewis, "That John "Bull was under his guardianſhip; that the beſt part "of his ſervants were at his command; that he could "have John gagged and bound whenever he pleaſed "by the people of his own family." In all theſe epiſtles, blockhead, dunce, aſs, coxcomb, were the beſt epithets he gave poor John. In others he threatened, "|| That he, Eſquire South, and the reſt of the tradeſ-"men, would lay Lewis down upon his back and beat "out his teeth, if he did not retire immediately, and "break up the meeting."

I fancy I need not tell my reader, that John often changed colour as he read, and that his fingers itched to give Nic. a good ſlap on the chops; but he wiſely

John Bull begged him to lay aſide that immoderate concern for him; and withal put him in mind, that the intereſt of thoſe tradeſmen had not ſat quite ſo heavy upon him ſome years ago, on a like occaſion. Nic. anſwered little to that, but immediately pulled out a boatſwain's whiſtle. Upon the firſt whiff, the tradeſmen came jumping into the room, and began to ſurround Lewis, like ſo many yelping curs about a great boar; or, to uſe a modeſter ſimile, like duns at a great Lord's levee the morning he goes into the country. One pulled him by his ſleeve, another by the ſkirt, a third hollowed in his ear: they began to aſk him for all, that had been taken from their fore-fathers by ſtealth, fraud, force, or lawful purchaſe: ſome aſked for manors, others for acres, that lay convenient for them; that he would pull down his fences, level his ditches: all agreed in one common demand, that he ſhould be purged, ſweated, vomited, and ſtarved, till he came to a ſizeable bulk, like that of his neighbours: one modeſtly aſked him leave to call him brother; Nic. Frog demanded two things, to be his porter and his fiſh-monger, to keep the keys of his gates, and furniſh the kitchen. John's ſiſter Peg only deſired, that he would let his ſervants ſing pſalms a Sundays. Some deſcended even to the aſking of old cloaths, ſhoes, and boots, broken bottles, tobacco-pipes, and ends of candles.

" Monſieur Bull, quoth Lewis, you ſeem to be a " man of ſome breeding; for God's ſake uſe your " intereſt

" If this be your " play, quoth John, that we may not be like a Qua- " ker's dumb meeting, let us begin ſome diverſion; " What d'ye think of rouly-pouly, or a country " dance? What if we ſhould have a match at foot- " ball? I am ſure we ſhall never end matters at this " rate."

CHAP. XVI.

How John Bull and Nic. Frog ſettled their accompts.

J. Bull. DURING this general ceſſation of talk, what if you and I, Nic. ſhould enquire how money-matters ſtand between us?

Nic. Frog. With all my heart, I love exact dealing; and let Hocus audit; he knows how the money was diſburſed.

J. Bull. I am not much for that at preſent; we'll ſettle it between ourſelves: fair and ſquare, Nic. keeps friends together. There have been laid out in this lawſuit, at one time, 36000 pounds and 40000 crowns: in ſome caſes I, in others you, bear the greateſt proportion.

Nic. Right: I pay three fifths of the greateſt number, and you pay two thirds of the leſſer number: I think this is fair and ſquare, as you call it.

J. Bull. Well, go on.

Nic.

Nic. Two thirds of 36000 pounds are 24000 pounds for your ſhare, and there remains 12000 for mine. Again, of the 40000 crowns I pay 24000, which is three fifths, and you pay only 16000, which is two fifths; 24000 crowns make 6000 pounds; and 16000 crowns make 4000 pounds; 12000 and 6000 make 18000; 24000 and 4000 make 28000. So there are 18000 pounds to my ſhare of the expences, and 28000 to your's.

After Nic. had bambouzled John a while about the 18000 and the 28000, John called for counters; but what with ſleight of hand, and taking from his own ſcore, and adding to John's, Nic. brought the balance always on his own ſide.

J. Bull. Nay, good friend Nic. though I am not quite ſo nimble in the fingers, I underſtand cyphering as well as you. I will produce you my accompts one by one, fairly writ out of my own books: and here I begin with the firſt. You muſt excuſe me, if I don't pronounce the law terms right.

John having read over his articles, with the reſpective ſums, brought in Frog debtor to him upon the balance 3382 12 00.

Then Nic. Frog pulled his bill out of his pocket and began to read:

To Major Will. - - - - -

And, ſumming all up, found due upon the balance by John Bull to Nic. Frog, 09 04 06

John Bull. As for your Venire facias, I have paid you for one already; in the other I believe you will be nonſuited. I'll take care of my nephew myſelf. Your coach-hire and family charges are moſt unreaſonable deductions; at that rate I can bring in any man in the world my debtor. But who the devil are thoſe two majors, that conſume all my money? I find they always run away with the balance in all accompts.

Nic. Frog. Two very honeſt gentlemen, I aſſure you, that have done me ſome ſervice. To tell you plainly, Major Ab. denotes thy greater ability, and Major Will. thy greater willingneſs to carry on this law-ſuit. It was but reaſonable that thou ſhouldſt pay both for thy power and thy poſitiveneſs.

J. Bull. I believe I ſhall have thoſe two honeſt Majors diſcount on my ſide in a little time.

Nic. Frog. Why all this higgling with thy friend about ſuch a paultry ſum? Does this become the generoſity of the noble and rich John Bull? I wonder thou art not aſhamed. Oh Hocus! Hocus! where art thou? It uſed to go another guiſe manner in thy time. When a poor man has almoſt undone himſelf for thy ſake, thou art for fleecing him, and fleecing him; is that thy conſcience, John?

J. Bull. Very pleaſant indeed! It is well known thou retaineſt thy lawyers by the year, ſo a freſh law-ſuit adds but little to thy expences; * they are thy cuſtomers;

cuſtomers; I hardly ever ſell them a farthing's worth of any thing; nay, thou haſt ſet up an eating-houſe, where the whole tribe of them ſpend all they can rap or run. If it were well reckoned, I believe thou getteſt more of my money than thou ſpendeſt of thy own; however, if thou wilt needs plead poverty, own at leaſt, that thy accompts are falſe.

Nic. Frog. No marry won't I; I refer myſelf to theſe honeſt gentlemen; let them judge between us. Let Eſquire South ſpeak his mind, whether my accompts are not right, and whether we ought not to go on with our law-ſuit.

J. Bull. Conſult the butchers about keeping of Lent. Doſt think that John Bull will be tried by † Piepowders? I tell you once for all, John Bull knows where his ſhoe pinches: none of your Eſquires ſhall give him the law, as long as he wears this truſty weapon by his ſide, or has an inch of broad-cloth in his ſhop.

Nic. Frog. Why there it is; you will be both judge and party; I am ſorry thou diſcovereſt ſo much of thy head-ſtrong humour before theſe ſtrange gentlemen: I have often told thee it would prove thy ruin ſome time or other: let it never be ſaid, that the famous John Bull has departed in deſpite of court.

J. Bull. And will it not reflect us much on thy character, Nic. to turn barretter in thy old days; a † Court of Piepowders (Curia pedis pulverizati) is a court of record incident to every fair; whereof the ſteward is judge, and the trial is by merchants and traders in the fair. It is ſo called, becauſe it is moſt uſual in the ſummer, and becauſe of the expedition in hearing cauſes; for the matter is to be done, complained of, heard, and determined the ſame day, that is, before the duſt goes off the feet of the plaintiffs and defendants.

ſtirrer up of quarrels amongſt thy neighbours? I tell thee, Nic. ſome time or other thou wilt repent this.

But John ſaw clearly, he ſhould have nothing but wrangling, and that he ſhould have as little ſucceſs in ſettling his accompts, as ending the compoſition. "Since they will needs overload my ſhoulders, quoth "John, I ſhall throw down the burden with a ſquaſh "amongſt them, take it up who dares; a man has a "fine time of it amongſt a combination of ſharpers, "that vouch for one another's honeſty. John, look "to thyſelf; old Lewis makes reaſonable offers; when "thou haſt ſpent the ſmall pittance that is left, thou "wilt make a glorious figure, when thou art brought "to live upon Nic. Frog and Eſquire South's genero-"ſity and gratitude: if they uſe thee thus, when they "want thee, what will they do when thou wanteſt "them? I ſay again, John, look to thyſelf."

JOHN wiſely ſtifled his reſentments, and told the company, that in a little time he ſhould give them law, or ſomething better.

All. ‡Law! law! Sir, by all means. What is twenty-two poor years towards the finiſhing a law-ſuit? For the love of God more law, Sir!

J. Bull. Prepare your demands? how many years more of law do you want, that I may order my affairs accordingly? In the mean while farewel.

‡ How John Bull found all his family in an uproar at home.

NIC. FROG, who thought of nothing but carrying John to the market, and there diſpoſing of him as his own proper goods, was mad to find that John thought himſelf now of age to look after his own affairs. He reſolved to traverſe this new project, and to make him uneaſy in his own family. He had corrupted or deluded moſt of his ſervants into the moſt extravagant conceits in the world; that their maſter was run mad, and wore a dagger in one pocket, and poiſon in the other; that he had ſold his wife and children to Lewis, diſinherited his heir, and was going to ſettle his eſtate upon a pariſh-boy; that, if they did not look after their maſter, he would do ſome very miſchievous thing. When John came home, he found a more ſurpriſing ſcene than any he had yet met with, and that you will ſay was ſomewhat extraordinary.

He called his cook-maid Betty to beſpeak his dinner: Betty told him, "That ſhe begged his pardon, "ſhe could not dreſs dinner, till ſhe knew what he "intended to do with his will." "Why, Betty, "quoth John, thou art not run mad, art thou? My "will at preſent is to have dinner." "That may "be, quoth Betty, but my conſcience won't allow me "to dreſs it, till I know whether you intend to do "righteous things by your heir?" "I am ſorry for "that, Betty, quoth John, I muſt find ſomebody elſe

" won't be offended, if I aſk you whether you in-

" poſitive anſwer, your beard may grow down to " Look ye, quoth Dick, I am very willing to ſerve

" you in my calling, d'ye ſee; but there are ſtrange

" muſt be ſatisfied if you intend to leave all to your " nephew, and if Nick. Frog is ſtill your executor,
" d'ye ſee; if you will not ſatisfy me as to theſe
" points, you may drink with the ducks." " And
" ſo I will, quoth John, rather than keep a butler
" that loves my heir better than myſelf." Hob the ſhoe-maker and Pricket the taylor told him, " They

" draper manage his concerns; that they could nei" ther makes ſhoe nor cloaths to any, that were not
" in good correſpondence with their worthy friend
" Nicholas."

J. Bull. Call Andrew my journey-man. How goes affairs, Andrew? I hope the devil has not taken poſſeſſion of thy body too.

Andrew. No, Sir; I only deſire to know what you would do if you were dead!

J. Bull. Juſt as other dead folks do, Andrew, ——This is amazing! Aſide.

Andrew. I mean, if your nephew ſhall inherit your eſtate?

J. Bull. That depends upon himſelf. I ſhall do nothing to hinder him.

Andrew. But will you make it ſure?

J. Bull. Thou meaneſt, that I ſhould put him in poſſeſſion, for I can make it no ſurer without that; he has all the law can give him.

Andrew. Indeed poſſeſſion, as you ſay, would make it much ſurer; they ſay, it is eleven points of the law.

JOHN began now to think that they were all enchanted; he enquired about the age of the moon; if Nic. had not given them ſome intoxicating potion, or if old mother Jeniſa was ſtill alive? "No, o'my "faith, quoth Harry, I believe there is no potion in "the caſe, but a little Aurum potabile. You will "have more of this by and by." He had ſcarce ſpoke the word, when another friend of John's accoſted him after the following manner:

"Since thoſe worthy perſons, who are as much "concerned for your ſafety as I am, have employed "me as their orator, I deſire to know whether you "will have it by way of Syllogiſm, Enthymem, Dilem- "ma, or Sorites."

JOHN now began to be diverted with their extravagance.

J. Bull. Let's have a Sorites by all means; though they are all new to me.

Friend. It is evident to all, who are verſed in hiſtory, that there were two ſiſters that played the whore two thouſand years ago: therefore it plainly follows, that it is not lawful for John Bull to have any manner of intercourſe with Lewis Baboon: if it is not lawful for John Bull to have any manner of intercourſe (correſpondence, if you will, that is much the ſame thing) then à fortiori, it is much more unlawful for the ſaid John to make over his wife and children to the ſaid Lewis: if his wife and children are not to be made over, he is not to wear a dagger and rat's-bane in his pockets: if he wears a dagger and rat's-bane, it muſt be to do miſchief to himſelf, or ſomebody elſe: if he intends to do miſchief, he ought to be under guardians, and there is none ſo fit as myſelf, and ſome other worthy perſons, who have a commiſſion for that purpoſe from Nic. Frog, the executor of his will and teſtament.

J. Bull. And this is your Sorites, you ſay, —— With that he ſnatched a good tough oaken cudgel, and began to brandiſh it; then happy was the man that was firſt at the door; crowding to get out, they tumbled down ſtairs; and it is credibly reported ſome of them dropped very valuable things in the hurry, which were picked up by others of the family.

"That any of theſe rogues, quoth John, ſhould "imagine, I am not as much concerned as they about "having my affairs in a ſettled condition, or that I "would wrong my heir for I know not what! Well, "Nic. I really cannot but applaud thy diligence; I "muſt own this is really a pretty ſort of a trick, but "it ſhan't do thy buſineſs for all that."

CHAP. XVIII.

† How Lewis Baboon came to viſit John Bull, and what paſſed between them.

I THINK it is but ingenuous to acquaint the reader, that this chapter was not wrote by Sir Humphrey himſelf, but by another very able pen of the univerſity of Grub-ſtreet.

JOHN had (by ſome good inſtructions given him by Sir Roger) got the better of his cholerick temper, and wrought himſelf up to a great ſteadineſs of mind to purſue his own intereſt through all impediments that were thrown in the way: he began to leave off ſome of his old acquaintance, his roaring and bullying about the ſtreets; he put on a ſerious air, knit his brows, and, for the time, had made a very conſiderable progreſs in politicks, conſidering that he had been kept a ſtranger to his own affairs. However, he could not help diſcovering ſome remains of his nature, when he happened to meet with a foot-ball, or a match at cricket; for which Sir Roger was ſure to take him to taſk. John was walking about his room, with folded arms and a moſt thoughtful countenance: his ſervant brought him word, that one Lewis Baboon below wanted to ſpeak with him. John had got an impreſſion, that Lewis was ſo deadly cunning a man, that he was afraid to venture himſelf alone with him: at laſt he took heart of grace; "Let him come up, "quoth he, it is but ſticking to my point, and he can "never over-reach me."

† Private negotiations about Dunkirk.

Lewis Baboon. Monſieur Bull, I will frankly acknowledge, that my behaviour to my neighbours has been ſomewhat uncivil, and I believe you will readily grant me, that I have met with uſage accordingly. I was fond of backſword and cudgel-play from my youth, and I now bear in my body many a black and blue gaſh and ſcar, God knows. I had as good a warehouſe, and as fair poſſeſſions, as any of my neighbours, though I ſay it; but a contentious temper, flattering ſervants, and unfortunate ſtars, have brought me into circumſtances that are not unknown to you. Theſe my misfortunes are heightened by domeſtick calamities. That I need not relate. I am a poor battered old fellow, and I would willingly end my days in peace: but alas! I ſee but ſmall hopes of that, for every new circumſtance affords an argument to my enemies to purſue their revenge; formerly I was to be banged, becauſe I was too ſtrong, and now becauſe I am too weak to reſiſt; I am to be brought down when too rich, and oppreſſed when too poor. Nic. Frog has uſed me like a ſcoundrel; you are a gentleman, and I freely put myſelf in your hands to diſpoſe of me as you think fit.

J. Bull. Look you, Maſter Baboon, as to your uſage of your neighbours, you had beſt not dwell too much upon that chapter; let it ſuffice at preſent, that you have been met with: you have been rolling a great ſtone up hill all your life, and at laſt it has come tumbling down till it is like to cruſh you to pieces: plain-dealing is beſt. If you have any particular mark, Mr. Baboon, whereby one may know when you fib, and when you ſpeak truth, you had beſt tell it me, that one may proceed accordingly; but, ſince at preſent I know of none ſuch, it is better that you ſhould truſt me, than that I ſhall truſt you.

L. Baboon. I know of no particular mark of veracity among us tradeſmen, but intereſt; and it is manifeſtly mine not to deceive you at this time; you may ſafely truſt me, I can aſſure you.

J. Bull. The truſt I give is in ſhort this; I muſt have ſomething in hand before I make the bargain, and the reſt before it is concluded.

L. Baboon. To ſhew you I deal fairly, name your ſomething.

J. Bull. I need not tell thee, old boy; thou canſt gueſs.

L. Baboon. * Eccleſdown-caſtle, I'll warrant you, becauſe it has been formerly in your family! Say no more, you ſhall have it.

J. Bull. I ſhall have it to m'own ſelf?

L. Baboon. To thy n'own ſelf.

J. Bull. Every wall, gate, room, and inch of Eccleſdown-caſtle, you ſay!

L. Baboon. Juſt ſo.

J. Bull. Every ſingle ſtone of Eccleſdown-caſtle, to m'own ſelf, ſpeedily!

L. Baboon. When you pleaſe; what needs more words?

J. Bull. But tell me, old boy, haſt thou laid aſide all thy equivocals and mentals in this caſe?

L. Baboon. There's nothing like matter of fact; ſeeing is believing.

J. Bull. Now thou talk'ſt to the purpoſe; let us

ſhake

ſhake hands, old boy. Let me aſk thee one queſtion more; What haſt thou to do to meddle with the affairs of my family? to diſpoſe of my eſtate, old boy?

L. Baboon. Juſt as much as you have to do with the affairs of lord Strutt.

J. Bull. Ay, but my trade, my very being, was concerned in that.

L. Baboon. And my intereſt was concerned in the other: but let us both drop our pretences; for I believe it is a moot point, whether I am more likely to make a maſter Bull, or you a lord Strutt.

J. Bull. Agreed, old boy; but then I muſt have ſecurity, that I ſhall carry my broad-cloth to market, old boy.

L. Baboon. That you ſhall: Eccleſdown-caſtle! Eccleſdown! remember that: why would'ſt thou not take it, when it was offered thee ſome years ago?

J. Bull. I would not take it, becauſe they told me thou would'ſt not give it me.

L. Baboon. How could Monſieur Bull be ſo groſſly abuſed by downright nonſenſe? they that adviſed you to refuſe, muſt have believed I intended to give, elſe why would they not make the experiment? but I can tell you more of that matter, than perhaps you know at preſent.

J. Bull. But what ſay'ſt thou as to the Eſquire, Nic. Frog, and the reſt of the tradeſmen! I muſt take care of them.

L. Baboon. Thou haſt but ſmall obligation to Nic. to my certain knowledge: he has not uſed me like a gentleman.

J. Bull.

J. Bull. Nic. indeed is not very nice in your punctilio's of ceremony; he is clowniſh, as a man may ſay: belching and calling of names have been allowed him time out of mind, by preſcription: but, however, we are engaged in one common cauſe, and I muſt look after him.

L. Baboon. All matters that relate to him, and the reſt of the plaintiffs in this law-ſuit, I will refer to your juſtice.

CHAP. XIX.

Nic. Frog's letter to John Bull; wherein he endeavours to vindicate all his conduct, with relation to John Bull and the law-ſuit.

NIC. perceived now that his cully had eloped, that John intended henceforth to deal without a broker; but he was reſolved to leave no ſtone unturned to recover his bubble: amongſt other artifices, he wrote a moſt obliging letter, which he ſent him printed in a fair character.

John received this with a good deal of ſang froid: tranſeat, quoth John, cum cæteris erroribus. He was now at his eaſe; he ſaw he could now make a very good bargain for himſelf, and a very ſafe one for other folks. " My ſhirt, quoth he, is near me, but my ſkin

CHAP. XX.

* The diſcourſe that paſſed between Nic. Frog and Eſquire South, which John Bull overheard.

JOHN thought every minute a year, till he got into Eccleſdown-caſtle; he repairs to the Salutation, with a deſign to break the matter gently to his partners; before he entered, he overheard Nic. and the Eſquire in a very pleaſant conference.

Eſq. South. Oh the ingratitude and injuſtice of mankind! that John Bull, whom I have honoured with my friendſhip and protection ſo long, ſhould flinch at laſt, and pretend that he can diſburſe no more money for me! that the family of the Souths, by his ſneaking temper, ſhould be kept out of their own!

Nic. Frog. An't like your worſhip, I am in amaze at it; I think the rogue ſhould be compelled to his duty.

Eſq. South. That he ſhould prefer his ſcandalous pelf, the duſt and dregs of the earth, to the proſperity and grandeur of my family.

Nic. Frog. Nay, he is miſtaken there too; for he would quickly lick himſelf whole again by his vails. It's ſtrange he ſhould prefer Philip Baboon's cuſtom to Eſquire South's.

Eſq. South. As you ſay, that my clothier, that is to get ſo much by the purchaſe, ſhould refuſe to put me in poſſeſſion; did you ever know any man's tradeſman ſerve him ſo before?

* Negotiations between the Emperor and the Dutch for continuing the war, and getting the property of Flanders.

Nic.

Nic. Frog. No, indeed, an't pleaſe your worſhip, it is a very unuſual proceeding; and I would not have been guilty of it for the world. If your honour had not a great ſtock of moderation and patience, you would not bear it ſo well as you do.

Eſq. South. It is moſt intolerable, that's certain, Nic. and I will be revenged.

Nic. Frog. Methinks it is ſtrange, that Philip Baboon's tenants do not all take your honour's part, conſidering how good and gentle a maſter you are.

Eſq. South. True, Nic. but few are ſenſible of merit in this world: it is a great comfort to have ſo faithful a friend as thyſelf in ſo critical a juncture.

Nic. Frog. If all the world ſhould forſake you, be aſſured Nic. Frog never will; let us ſtick to our point, and we'll manage Bull, I'll warrant ye.

Eſq. South. Let me kiſs thee, dear Nic. I have found one honeſt man among a thouſand at laſt.

Nic. Frog. If it were poſſible, your honour has it in your power to wed me ſtill cloſer to your intereſt.

Eſq. South. Tell me quickly, dear Nic.

Nic. Frog. You know I am your tenant; the difference between my leaſe and an inheritance is ſuch a trifle, as I am ſure you will not grudge your poor friend; that will be an encouragement to go on; beſides it will make Bull as mad as the devil: you and I ſhall be able to manage him then to ſome purpoſe.

Eſq. South. Say no more, it ſhall be done, Nic. to thy heart's content.

John all this while was liſtening to this comical dialogue, and laughed heartily in his ſleeve at the pride and ſimplicity of the Eſquire, and the ſly roguery of his friend Nic. Then of a ſudden bolting into the room, he began to tell them, that he believed he had brought Lewis to reaſonable terms, if they would pleaſe to hear them.

Then they all bawl'd out aloud, "no compoſi-"tion, Long live Eſquire South and the law!" As John was going to proceed, ſome roared, ſome ſtamped with their feet, others ſtopt their ears with their fingers.

Nay, gentlemen, quoth John, if you will but ſtop proceeding for a while, you ſhall judge yourſelves whether ‡ Lewis's propoſals are reaſonable.

All. Very fine indeed, ſtop proceeding, and ſo loſe a term.

J. Bull. Not ſo neither, we have ſomething by way of advance, he will put us in poſſeſſion of his manor and caſtle of Eccleſdown.

Nic. Frog. What doſt thou talk of us, thou meaneſt thyſelf.

J. Bull. When Frog took poſſeſſion of any thing, it was always ſaid to be for us, and why may not John Bull be us, as well as Nic. Frog was us? I hope John Bull is no more confined to ſingularity than Nic. Frog; or, take it ſo, the conſtant doctrine, that thou haſt preached up for many years, was, that Thou and I are One; and why muſt we be ſuppoſed Two in this caſe, that were always One before: it's impoſſible that Thou and I can fall out, Nic. we muſt truſt one another; I have truſted thee with a great many things, prithee truſt me with this one trifle.

Nic.

Nic. Frog. That principle is true in the main, but there is ſome ſpeciality in this caſe, that makes it highly inconvenient for us both.

J. Bull. Thoſe are your jealouſies, that the common enemies ſow between us; how often haſt thou warned me of thoſe rogues, Nic. that would make us miſtruſtful of one another!

Nic. Frog. This Eccleſdown-caſtle is only a bone of contention.

J. Bull. It depends upon you to make it ſo, for my part I am as peaceable as a lamb.

Nic. Frog. But do you conſider the unwholeſomeneſs of the air and ſoil, the expences of reparations and ſervants? I would ſcorn to accept of ſuch a quagmire.

J. Bull. You are a great man, Nic. but, in my circumſtances, I muſt be e'en content to take it as it is.

Nic. Frog. And you are really ſo ſilly, as to believe the old cheating rogue will give it you?

J. Bull. I believe nothing but matter of fact, I ſtand and fall by that, I am reſolved to put him to it.

Nic. Frog. And ſo relinquiſh the hopefulleſt cauſe in the world, a claim that will certainly in the end make thy fortune for ever!

J. Bull. Wilt thou purchaſe it, Nic? thou ſhalt have a lumping penny-worth; nay, rather than we ſhould differ, I'll give thee ſomething to take it off my hands.

Nic. Frog. If thou would'ſt but moderate that haſty, impatient temper of thine, thou ſhould'ſt quickly ſee a better thing than all that. What ſhould'ſt thou think to find old Lewis turned out of his paternal eſtates, and the manſion-houſe of ‡ Clay-pool? Would not that do thy heart good, to ſee thy old friend Nic. Frog Lord of Clay-pool? then thou and thy wife and children ſhould walk in my gardens, buy toys, drink lemonade, and now and then we ſhould have a country dance.

J. Bull. I love to be plain, I'd as lieve ſee myſelf in Eccleſdown-caſtle, as thee in Clay-pool. I tell you again, Lewis gives this as a pledge of his ſincerity; if you won't ſtop proceeding to hear him, I will.

CHAP. XXI.

‖ The reſt of Nic's fetches to keep John out of Eccleſdown- caſtle.

WHEN Nic. could not diſſuade John by argument, he tried to move his pity; he pretended to be ſick and like to die, that he ſhould leave his wife and children in a ſtarving condition, if John did abandon him; that he was hardly able to crawl about the room, far leſs capable to look after ſuch a troubleſome buſineſs as this law-ſuit, and therefore begged that his good friend would not leave him. When he ſaw that John was ſtill inexorable, he pulled out a caſe-knife, with which he uſed to ſnicker-ſnee, and threatened to cut his own throat. Thrice he aimed the knife to his wind-pipe with a moſt determined threatening air. "What ſignifies life, quoth he, in "this languiſhing condition? It will be ſome plea-

" ſure, that my friends will revenge my death upon " this barbarous man, that has been the cauſe of it." All this while John looked ſedate and calm, neither offering in the leaſt to ſnatch the knife, nor ſtop his blow, truſting to the tenderneſs Nic. had for his own perſon: when he perceived, that John was immoveable in his purpoſe, he applied himſelf to Lewis.

" Art thou, quoth he, turned bubble in thy old-" age, from being a ſharper in thy youth? What " occaſion haſt thou to give up Eccleſdown-caſtle to " John Bull? his friendſhip is not worth a ruſh; " give it me, and I'll make it worth thy while. L. Baboon. Monſieur Bull has uſed me like a gentleman, and I am reſolved to make good my promiſe, and truſt him for the conſequences.

Nic. Frog. Then I tell thee thou art an old doating fool—With that, Nic. bounced up with a ſpring equal to that of one of your nimbleſt tumblers or rope-dancers, and fell foul upon John Bull, to ſnatch the ‡ cudgel he had in his hand, that he might thwack Lewis with it: John held it faſt, ſo that there was no wrenching it from him. At laſt 'Squire South buckled too, to aſſiſt his friend Nic: John hawled on one ſide, and they two on the other; ſometimes they were like to pull John over; then it went all of a ſudden again on John's ſide; ſo they went ſee-ſawing up and down, from one end of the room to the other. Down tumbled the tables, bottles, glaſſes, and tobacco-pipes: the wine and the tobacco were all ſpilt about the room, and the little fellows were almoſt trod under foot, till more of the tradeſmen joining with Nic. and the 'Squire, John was hardly able to pull againſt them all, yet would he never quit hold of his truſty cudgel: which by the contrary force of two ſo great powers ‖ broke ſhort in his hands. Nic. ſeized the longer end, and with it began to baſtinado old Lewis, who had ſlunk into a corner, waiting the event of this ſquabble. Nic. came up to him with an inſolent menacing air, ſo that the old fellow was forced to ſkuttle out of the room, and retire behind a dung-cart. He called to Nic. "Thou inſolent jackanapes! "Time was when thou durſt not have uſed me ſo, "thou now takeſt me unprovided, but, old and infirm "as I am, I ſhall find a weapon by and by to chaſtiſe "thy impudence."

When John Bull had recovered his breath, he began to parly with Nic. "Friend Nic. I am glad to "find thee ſo ſtrong after thy great complaints: re-"ally thy motions, Nic. are pretty vigorous for a "conſumptive man. As for thy worldly affairs, Nic. "if it can do thee any ſervice, I freely make over to "thee this profitable law-ſuit, and I deſire all theſe "gentlemen to bear witneſs to this my act and deed. Nic. Frog. The counſel are feed, and all things prepared for a trial, thou ſhalt be forced to ſtand the iſſue: it ſhall be pleaded in thy name as well as mine: go home if thou can'ſt, the gates are ſhut, ‖ the turnpikes locked, and the roads barricadoed.

J. Bull. Even theſe very ways, Nic. that thou toldeſt me were as open to me as thyſelf? if I can't paſs with my own equipage, What can I expect for my goods and waggons? I am denied paſſage through thoſe very grounds, that I have purchaſed with my own money; however, I am glad I have made the experiment, it may ſerve me in ſome ſtead.

JOHN BULL was ſo overjoyed that he was going to take poſſeſſion of Eccleſdown, that nothing could vex him. " Nic. quoth he, I am juſt a going to leave " thee, caſt a kind look upon me at parting."

NIC. looked ſowre and grum, and would not open his mouth.

J. Bull. " I wiſh thee all the ſucceſs, that thy " heart can deſire, and that theſe honeſt gentlemen " of the long robe may have their belly-full of law."

NIC. could ſtand it no longer, but flung out of the room with diſdain, and beckoned the lawyers to follow him.

J. Bull. " B'uy, b'uy, Nic. not one poor ſmile " at parting; won't you ſhake your day-day, Nic. " b'uy, Nic." With that John marched out of the common road croſs the country to take poſſeſſion of Eccleſdown.

‖ Difficulty of the march of part of the army to Dunkirk.

CHAP. XXII.

Of the great joy that John expreſſed when he got poſſeſſion of * Eccleſdown.

WHEN John had got into his caſtle, he ſeemed like Ulyſſes upon his plank after he had been well ſouſed in ſalt-water; who (as Homer ſays) was as glad as a judge going to ſit down to dinner, after hearing a long cauſe upon the bench. I dare ſay John Bull's joy was equal to that of either of the two; he ſkipped from room to room; ran up ſtairs and down ſtairs, from the kitchen to the garrets, and from the garrets to the kitchen; he peeped into every cranny; ſometimes he admired the beauty of the architecture, and the vaſt ſolidity of the maſon's work; at other times he commended the ſymmetry and proportion of the rooms. He walked about the gardens; he bathed himſelf in the canal, ſwimming, diving, and beating the liquid element, like a milk-white ſwan. The hall reſounded with the ſprightly violin, and the martial hautboy. The family tript it about and capered, like hail-ſtones bounding from a marble floor. Wine, ale, and October flew about as plentifully as kennel-water: then a frolick took John in the head to call up ſome of Nic. Frog's penſioners, that had been ſo mutinous in his family.

J. Bull. Are you glad to ſee your maſter in Eccleſdown-caſtle?

All. Yes, indeed, Sir.

John Bull. Extremely glad?

* Dunkirk.

All.

All. Extremely glad, Sir.

J. Bull. Swear to me, that you are ſo.

Then they began to damn and ſink their ſouls to the loweſt pit of hell, if any perſon in the world rejoiced more than they did.

J. Bull. Now hang me if I don't believe you are a parcel of perjured raſcals; however take this bumper of October to your maſter's health.

Then John got upon the battlements, and, looking over, he called to Nic. Frog:

" How d'ye do, Nic? D'ye ſee where I am, Nic? " I hope the cauſe goes on ſwimmingly, Nic. When " doſt thou intend to go to Clay-pool, Nic? Wilt " thou buy there ſome high heads of the neweſt " cut for my daughters? How comeſt thou to go with " thy arm tied up? Has old Lewis given thee a rap " over thy fingers-ends? Thy weapon was a good " one, when I wielded it, but the butt-end remains " in my hands. I am ſo buſy in packing up my goods, " that I have no time to talk with thee any longer. " It would do thy heart good to ſee what waggon-" loads I am preparing for market. If thou wanteſt " any good office of mine, for all that has happened, " I will uſe thee well, Nic. B'uy, Nic."

CURIOUS DISCOURSE

ENTITLED

OR,

THE ART OF POLITICAL LYING.

THERE is now in the preſs a curious piece, entitled, Ψευδολογία Πολιτικὴ; or, The Art of Political Lying: conſiſting of two volumes in Quarto.

The PROPOSALS are

I. That, if the Author meets with ſuitable encouragement, he intends to deliver the firſt volume to the ſubſcribers by Hilary Term next.

II. The price of both volumes will be, to the ſubſcribers, fourteen ſhillings, ſeven whereof are to be paid down, and the other ſeven at the delivery of the ſecond volume.

III. Thoſe

III. Thoſe that ſubſcribe for ſix, ſhall have a ſeventh gratis, which reduces the price to leſs than ſix ſhillings a volume.

IV. That the ſubſcribers ſhall have their names and places of abode printed at length.

For the encouragement of ſo uſeful a work, it is thought fit the publick ſhould be informed of the contents of the firſt volume, by one who has with great care peruſed the manuſcript.

THE ART OF POLITICAL LYING.

THE author, in his preface, makes ſome very judicious reflections upon the original of arts and ſciences: that at firſt they conſiſt of ſcattered theorems and practices, which are handed about amongſt the maſters, and only revealed to the filii artis, till ſuch time as ſome great genius appears, who collects theſe disjointed propoſitions, and reduces them into a regular ſyſtem. That this is the caſe of that noble and uſeful art of Political Lying, which in this laſt age having been enriched with ſeveral new diſcoveries, ought not to lie any longer in rubbiſh and confuſion, but may juſtly claim a place in the Encyclopædia, eſpecially ſuch as ſerves for a model of education for an able politician. That he propoſes to himſelf no ſmall ſtock of fame in future ages, in being the firſt firſt who has undertaken this deſign; and for the ſame reaſon he hopes the imperfection of his work will be excuſed. He invites all perſons, who have any talents that way, or any new diſcovery, to communicate their thoughts, aſſuring them that honourable mention ſhall be made of them in his work.

The firſt volume conſiſts of eleven chapters.

In the firſt chapter of his excellent treatiſe, he reaſons philoſophically concerning the nature of the ſoul of man, and thoſe qualities which render it ſuſceptible of lyes. He ſuppoſes the ſoul to be of the nature of a plano-cylindrical ſpeculum, or looking-glaſs; that the plain ſide was made by God Almighty, but that the devil afterwards wrought the other ſide into a cylindrical figure. The plain ſide repreſents objects juſt as they are; and the cylindrical ſide, by the rules of catoptricks, muſt needs repreſent true objects falſe, and falſe objects true: but the cylindrical ſide, being much the larger ſurface, takes in a greater compaſs of viſual rays. That upon the cylindrical ſide of the ſoul of man depends the whole art and ſucceſs of Political Lying. The author, in this chapter, proceeds to reaſon upon the qualities of the mind: as its peculiar fondneſs of the malicious and the miraculous. The tendency of the ſoul towards the malicious ſprings from ſelf-love, or a pleaſure to find mankind more wicked, baſe, or unfortunate, than ourſelves. The deſign of the miraculous proceeds from the inactivity of the ſoul, or its incapacity to be moved or delighted with any thing that is vulgar or common. The author having having eſtabliſhed the qualities of the mind, upon which his art is founded, he proceeds,

In his ſecond chapter, to treat of the nature of Political Lying; which he defines to be, the art of convincing the people of ſalutary falſhoods, for ſome good end. He calls it an art, to diſtinguiſh it from that of telling truth, which does not ſeem to want art; but then he would have this underſtood only as to the invention, becauſe there is indeed more art neceſſary to convince the people of a ſalutary truth, than a ſalutary falſhood. Then he proceeds to prove, that there are ſalutary falſhoods, of which he gives a great many inſtances, both before and after the revolution; and demonſtrates plainly, that we could not have carried on the war ſo long without ſeveral of thoſe ſalutary falſhoods. He gives rules to calculate the value of a Political Lye, in pounds, ſhillings, and pence. By good he does not mean that which is abſolutely ſo, but what appears ſo to the artiſt, which is a ſufficient ground for him to proceed upon; and he diſtinguiſhes the good, as it commonly is, into bonum utile, dulce, et honeſtum. He ſhews you, that there are Political Lyes of a mixed nature, which include all the three in different reſpects: that the utile reigns generally about the Exchange, the dulce and honeſtum at the Weſtminſter end of the town. One man ſpreads a lye to ſell or buy ſtock to greater advantage; a ſecond, becauſe it is honourable to ſerve his party; and a third, becauſe it is ſweet to gratify his revenge. Having explained the ſeveral terms of his definition, he proceeds,

In his third chapter, to treat of the lawfulneſs of Political Political Lying; which he deduces from its true and genuine principles, by enquiring into the ſeveral rights that mankind have to truth. He ſhews, that people have a right to private truth from their neighbours, and œconomical truth from their own family, that they ſhould not be abuſed by their wives, children, and ſervants; but that they have no right at all to Political Truth; that the people may as well all pretend to be lords of manors, and poſſeſs great eſtates, as to have truth told them in matters of government. The author with great judgment ſtates the ſeveral ſhares of mankind in this matter of truth, according to their ſeveral capacities, dignities, and profeſſions; and ſhews you, that children have hardly any ſhare at all; in conſequence of which, they have very ſeldom any truth told them. It muſt be owned, that the author in this chapter has ſome ſeeming difficulties to anſwer, and texts of Scripture to explain.

The fourth chapter is wholly employed in this queſtion, whether the right of coinage of Political Lyes be wholly in the government? The author, who is a true friend to engliſh liberty, determines in the negative, and anſwers all the arguments of the oppoſite party with great acuteneſs; that, as the government of England has a mixture of democratical in it; ſo the right of inventing and ſpreading Political Lyes is partly in the people; and their obſtinate adherence to this juſt privilege has been moſt conſpicuous, and ſhined with great luſtre of late years: that it happens very often, that there are no other means left to the good people of England to pull down a miniſtry and government they are weary of, but by exerciſing this their undoubted right: that abundance of Political Lying is a ſure ſign of true engliſh liberty: that, as miniſters do ſometimes uſe tools to ſupport their power, it is but reaſonable that the people ſhould employ the ſame weapon to defend themſelves, and pull them down.

In his fifth chapter, he divides Political Lyes into ſeveral ſpecies and claſſes, and gives precepts about the inventing, ſpreading, and propagating the ſeveral ſorts of them: he begins with the rumores, and libelli famoſi, ſuch as concern the reputation of men in power: where he finds fault with the common miſtake, that takes notice only of one ſort, viz. the detractory, or defamatory, whereas in truth there are three ſorts, the detractory, the additory, and the tranſlatory. The additory gives to a great man a larger ſhare of reputation than belongs to him, to enable him to ſerve ſome good end or purpoſe. The detractory or defamatory is a lye, which takes from a great man the reputation that juſtly belongs to him, for fear he ſhould uſe it to the detriment of the publick. The tranſlatory is a lye, that transfers the merit of a man's good action to another, who is in himſelf more deſerving; or tranſfers the demerit of a bad action from the true author to a perſon who is in himſelf leſs deſerving. He gives ſeveral inſtances of very great ſtrokes in all the three kinds, eſpecially in the laſt, when it was neceſſary for the good of the publick to beſtow the valour and conduct of one man upon another, and that of many to one man, nay even *, upon a good occaſion, a man may

* Major-general Webb obtained a glorious victory over the French near Wynendale in the year 1708. He was ſent with 6000 of the confederate troops to guard a great convoy to the allied army beſieging may be robbed of his victory by a perſon that did not command in the action. The reſtoring and deſtroying the publick may be aſcribed to perſons who had no hand in either. The author exhorts all gentlemen practitioners to exerciſe themſelves in the tranſlatory, becauſe, the exiſtence of the things themſelves being viſible, and not demanding any proof, there wants nothing to be put upon the publick, but a falſe author, or a falſe cauſe; which is no great preſumption upon the credulity of mankind, to whom the ſecret ſprings of things are for the moſt part unknown.

The author proceeds to give ſome precepts as to the additory: that when one aſcribes any thing to a perſon, which does not belong to him, the lye ought to be calculated not quite contradictory to his known qualities: for example, one would not make the french King preſent at a Proteſtant conventicle; nor, like queen Elizabeth, reſtore the overplus of taxes to his ſubjects. One would not bring in the Emperor giving two months pay in advance to his troops; nor the beſieging Liſle; Count de la Motte came out from Ghent with near 24,000 men to intercept them; but Major-general Webb diſpoſed his men with ſuch admirable ſkill, that, notwithſtanding the vaſt ſuperiority of numbers, by the pure force of Order and Diſpoſition the French were driven back in two or three ſucceſſive attempts, and, after having loſt 6 or 7000 men, could be brought to charge no more. This may juſtly be reckoned amongſt the greateſt actions of that war: but the Duke of Marlborough's ſecretary, in his letter written to England, gave all the honour of it to General Cadogan, the Duke's favourite, who did not come up till after the engagement. This was ſo reſented by General Webb, that he left the army in diſguſt; and, coming into England to do himſelf juſtice, received the unanimous thanks of the Houſe of Commons for his eminent ſervices by that great action; which was alſo acknowledged in a diſtinguiſhing manner by the King of Pruſſia, who beſtowed on him the Order of Generoſity.

Dutch paying more than their quota. One would not make the ſame perſon zealous for a ſtanding-army and publick liberty; nor an atheiſt ſupport the church; nor a lewd fellow a reformer of manners; nor a hot-headed, crack-brained coxcomb forward for a ſcheme of moderation. But, if it is abſolutely neceſſary, that a perſon is to have ſome good adventitious quality given him, the author's precept is, that it ſhould not be done at firſt in extremo gradu. For example; they ſhould not make a covetous man give away all at once five thouſand pounds in a charitable generous way; twenty or thirty pounds may ſuffice at firſt. They ſhould not introduce a perſon of remarkable ingratitude to his benefactors, rewarding a poor man for ſome good office that was done him thirty years ago; but they may allow him to acknowledge a ſervice to a perſon, who is capable ſtill to do him another. A man, whoſe perſonal courage is ſuſpected, is not at firſt to drive whole ſquadrons before him; but he may be allowed the merit of ſome ſquabble, or throwing a bottle at his adverſary's head.

It will not be allowed to make a great man, that is a known deſpiſer of religion, ſpend whole days in his cloſet at his devotion; but you may with ſafety make him ſit out publick prayers with decency. A great man, who has never been known willingly to pay a juſt debt, ought not all of a ſudden to be introduced making reſtitution of thouſands he has cheated; let it ſuffice at firſt to pay twenty pounds to a friend, who has loſt his note.

He lays down the ſame rules in the detractory or defamatory kind: that they ſhould not be quite oppoſite

to the qualities the perſons are ſuppoſed to have. Thus it will not be found according to the ſound rules of pſeudology, to report of a pious and religious prince, that he neglects his devotion, and would introduce hereſy; but you may report of a merciful prince, that he has pardoned a criminal who did not deſerve it. You will be unſucceſsful, if you give out of a great man, who is remarkable for his frugality for the publick, that he ſquanders away the nation's money; but you may ſafely relate that he hoards it: you muſt not affirm he took a bribe; but you may freely cenſure him for being tardy in his payments; becauſe though neither may be true, yet the laſt is credible, the firſt not. Of an open-hearted generous miniſter you are not to ſay, that he was in an intrigue to betray his country; but you may affirm, with ſome probability, that he was in an intrigue with a lady. He warns all practitioners to take good heed to theſe precepts; for want of which, many of their lyes have of late proved abortive or ſhort-lived.

In the ſixth chapter he treats of the miraculous; by which he underſtands any thing that exceeds the common degrees of probability. In reſpect of the people it is divided into two ſorts, the τὸ φοβερὸν, or the τὸ θυμοειδες, terrifying lyes, and animating or encouraging lyes, both being extremely uſeful on their proper occaſions. Concerning the τὸ φοβερὸν he gives ſeveral rules; one of which is, that terrible objects ſhould not be too frequently ſhewn to the people, leſt they grow familiar. He ſays, it is abſolutely neceſſary, that the people of England ſhould be frighted with the french king and the pretender once a year; but that the bears ſhould be chained up again till that time twelvemonth. The want of obſerving this ſo neceſſary a precept, in bringing out the raw-head and bloody-bones upon every trifling occaſion, has produced great indifference in the vulgar of late years. As to the animating or encouraging lyes, he gives the following rules; that they ſhould not far exceed the common degrees of probability; that there ſhould be variety of them; and the ſame lye not obſtinately inſiſted upon: that the promiſſory or prognoſticating lyes ſhould not be upon ſhort days, for fear the authors ſhould have the ſhame and confuſion to ſee themſelves ſpeedily contradicted. He examines by theſe rules that well-meant, but unfortunate lye of the conqueſt of France, which continued near † twenty years together; but at laſt, by being too obſtinately inſiſted upon, it was worn threadbare, and became unſucceſsful.

As to the τὸ τερατῶδες, or the prodigious, he has little to adviſe, but that their comets, whales, and dragons ſhould be ſizeable; their ſtorms, tempeſts, and earthquakes, without the reach of a day's journey of a man and horſe.

The ſeventh chapter is wholly taken up in an enquiry, ‖ which of the two parties are the greateſt artiſts in Political Lying. He owns, that ſometimes the one party, and ſometimes the other, is better believed, but that they have both very great genius's amongſt them. He attributes the ill ſucceſs of either party to their glutting the market, and retailing too much of a bad commodity at once: when there is too great a quantity of worms, it is hard to catch gudgeons. He propoſes a ſcheme for the recovery of the credit of any party, which indeed ſeems to be ſomewhat chimerical, and does not ſavour of that ſound judgment the author has ſhewn in the reſt of the work. It amounts to this, that the party ſhould agree to vent nothing but truth for three months together, which will give them credit for ſix months lying afterwards. He owns, that he believes it almoſt impoſſible to find fit perſons to execute this ſcheme. Towards the end of the chapter, he inveighs ſeverely againſt the folly of parties, in retaining ſcoundrels and men of low genius to retail their lyes; ſuch as moſt of the preſent newswriters are, who, except a ſtrong bent and inclination towards the profeſſion, ſeem to be wholly ignorant in the rules of pſeudology, and not at all qualified for ſo weighty a truſt.

In his next chapter he treats of ſome extraordinary genius's, who have appeared of late years, eſpecially in their diſpoſition towards the miraculous. He adviſes thoſe hopeful young men to turn their invention to the ſervice of their country, it being inglorious, at this time, to employ their talent in prodigious foxchaces, horſe-courſes, feats of activity in driving of coaches, jumping, running, ſwallowing of peaches, pulling out whole ſetts of teeth to clean, etc. when their country ſtands ſo much in need of their aſſiſtance.

The eighth chapter is a project for uniting the ſeveral ſmaller corporations of lyars into one ſociety. It is too tedious to give a full account of the whole ſcheme: what is moſt remarkable is, that this ſociety ought to conſiſt of the heads of each party: that no lye is to paſs current without their approbation, they being the beſt judges of the preſent exigencies, and what ſort of lyes are demanded: that in ſuch a corporation there ought to be men of all profeſſions, that τὸ πρέπον, and the τὸ εὐλόγον, that is, decency and probability, may be obſerved as much as poſſible: that, beſides the perſons above-mentioned, this ſociety ought to conſiſt of the hopeful genius's about the town, (of which there are great plenty to be picked up in the ſeveral coffee-houſes) travellers, virtuoſo's, fox-hunters, jockies, attornies, old ſeamen and ſoldiers out of the hoſpitals of Greenwich and Chelſea: to this ſociety, ſo conſtituted, ought to be committed the ſole management of lying: that in their outer-room there ought always to attend ſome perſons endowed with a great ſtock of credulity, a generation that thrives mightily in this ſoil and climate: he thinks a ſufficient number of them may be picked up any-where about the Exchange: theſe are to circulate what the other coin; for no man ſpreads a lye with ſo good a grace, as he that believes it: that the rule of the ſociety be to invent a lye, and ſometimes two, for every day; in the choice of which great regard ought to be had to the weather and the ſeaſon of the year: your φοβερὰ, or terrifying lyes, do mighty well in November and December, but not ſo well in May and June, unleſs the eaſterly winds reign: that it ought to be penal for any body to talk of any thing but the lye of the day: that the ſociety is to maintain a ſufficient number of ſpies at court, and other places, to furniſh hints and topicks for invention, and a general correſpondence of all the market-towns for circulating their lyes: that if any one of the ſociety were obſerved to bluſh, or look out of countenance, or want a neceſſary circumſtance in telling the lye, he ought to be expelled, and declared incapable: beſides the roaring lyes, there ought to be a private committee for whiſpers, conſtituted of the ableſt men of the ſociety. Here the author makes a digreſſion in praiſe of the Whig-party, for the right underſtanding and uſe of proof-lyes. A proof-lye is like a proof-charge for a piece of ordnance, to try a ſtandard credulity. Of ſuch a nature he takes tranſubſtantiation to be in the church of Rome, a proof-article, which if any one ſwallows, they are ſure he will digeſt every thing elſe: therefore the Whig-party do wiſely to try the credulity of the people ſometimes by ſwingers, that they may be able to judge, to what height they may charge them afterwards. Towards the end of this chapter, he warns the heads of parties againſt believing their own lyes, which has proved of pernicious conſequence of late, both a wiſe party, and a wiſe nation, having regulated their affairs upon lyes of their own invention. The cauſes of this he ſuppoſes to be too great a zeal and intenſeneſs in the practice of this art, and a vehement heat in mutual converſation, whereby they perſuade one another, that what they wiſh, and report to be true, is really ſo: that all parties have been ſubject to this misfortune. The Jacobites have been conſtantly infeſted with it; but the Whigs of late ſeemed even to exceed them in this ill habit and weakneſs. To this chapter the author ſubjoins a calendar of lyes, proper for the ſeveral months of the year.

The ninth chapter treats of the celerity and duration of lyes. As to the celerity of their motion, the author ſays it is almoſt incredible: he gives ſeveral inſtances of lyes, that have gone faſter than a man can ride poſt: your terrifying lyes travel at a prodigious rate, above ten miles an hour; your whiſpers move in a narrow vortex, but very ſwiftly. The author ſays, it is impoſſible to explain ſeveral phænomena in relation to the celerity of lyes, without the ſuppoſition of ſynchroniſm and combination. As to the duration of lyes, he ſays there are of all ſorts, from hours and days to ages; that there are ſome, which like inſects die and revive again in a different form; that good artiſts, like people who build upon a ſhort leaſe, will calculate the duration of a lye ſurely to anſwer their purpoſe; to laſt juſt as long, and no longer, than the turn is ſerved.

The tenth chapter treats of the characteriſticks of lyes; how to know, when, where, and by whom invented? Your dutch, engliſh, and french ware are amply diſtinguiſhed from one another; an exchange lye from one coined at the other end of the town: great judgment is to be ſhewn as to the place, where the ſpecies is intended to circulate: very low and baſe coin will ſerve for Wapping: there are ſeveral coffee-houſes, that have their particular ſtamps, which a judicious practitioner may eaſily know. All your great men have their proper phantateuſticks. The author ſays, he has attained by ſtudy and application to ſo great ſkill in this matter, that, bring him any lye, he can tell whoſe image it bears ſo truly, as the great man himſelf ſhall not have the face to deny it. The promiſſory miſſory lyes of great men are known by ſhouldering, hugging, ſqueezing, ſmiling, bowing; and their lyes in matter of fact by immoderate ſwearing.

He ſpends the whole eleventh chapter on one ſimple queſtion, whether a lye is beſt contradicted by truth, or by another lye? The author ſays, that, conſidering the large extent of the cylindrical ſurface of the ſoul, and the great propenſity to believe lyes in the generality of mankind of late years, he thinks the propereſt contradiction to a lye is another lye. For example; if it ſhould be reported, that the Pretender was at London, one would not contradict it by ſaying, he never was in England; but you muſt prove by eye-witneſſes, that he came no farther than Greenwich, and then went back again. Thus if it be ſpread about, that a great perſon were dying of ſome diſeaſe, you muſt not ſay the truth, that they are in health, and never had ſuch a diſeaſe, but that they are ſlowly recovering of it. So there was not long ago a gentleman, who affirmed, that the treaty with France for bringing popery and ſlavery into England was ſigned the 15th of September; to which another anſwered very judiciouſly, not by oppoſing truth to his lye, that there was no ſuch treaty; but that, to his certain knowledge, there were many things in that treaty not yet adjuſted.

The account of the ſecond volume of this excellent treatiſe is reſerved for another time.

HUMBLY OFFERED

By the company exerciſing the trade and myſtery of UPHOLDERS, Againſt part of the BILL, for the better viewing, ſearching, and examining drugs, medicines, etc. 1724*.

BEING called upon by ſeveral retailers and diſpenſers of drugs and medicines about town, to uſe our endeavours againſt the bill now depending for viewing, etc. In regard of our common intereſt, and in gratitude to the ſaid retailers and diſpenſers of medicines, which we have always found to be very effectual, we preſume to lay the following reaſons before the publick againſt the ſaid bill.

That the company of upholders are far from being averſe to the giving of drugs and medicines in general, provided they may be of ſuch qualities as we require, and adminiſtered by ſuch perſons, in whom our company juſtly repoſe the greateſt confidence: and, provided they tend to the encouragement of trade, and the conſumption of the woollen manufacture of this kingdom.

* In the year 1724 the phyſicians made application to parliament to prevent apothecaries diſpenſing medicines without the preſcription of a phyſician: during which this tract was diſperſed in the court of requeſts.

We beg leave to obſerve, that there hath been no complaint from any of the nobility, gentry, and citizens whom we have attended. Our practice, which conſiſts chiefly in outward applications, having been always ſo effectual, that none of our patients have been obliged to undergo a ſecond operation, excepting one gentlewoman; who, after her firſt burial, having burthened her huſband with a new brood of poſthumous children, her ſecond funeral was by us performed without any farther charges to the ſaid huſband of the deceaſed. And we humbly hope, that one ſingle inſtance of this kind, a misfortune owing merely to the avarice of a ſexton in cutting off a ring, will not be imputed to any want of ſkill or care in our company.

We humbly conceive, that the power by this bill lodged in the cenſors of the college of phyſicians to reſtrain any of his majeſty's ſubjects from diſpenſing, and well-diſpoſed perſons from taking what medicines they pleaſe, is a manifeſt encroachment on the liberty and property of the ſubject.

As the company, exerciſing the trade and myſtery of upholders, have an undiſputed right in and upon the bodies of all and every the ſubjects of the kingdom; we conceive the paſſing of this bill, though not abſolutely depriving them of their ſaid right, might keep them out of poſſeſſion by unreaſonable delays, to the great detriment of our company and their numerous families.

We hope it will be conſidered, that there are multitudes titudes of neceſſitous heirs and penurious parents, perſons in pinching circumſtances with numerous families of children, wives that have lived long, many robuſt aged women with great jointures, elder brothers with bad underſtandings, ſingle heirs of great eſtates, whereby the collateral line are for ever excluded, reverſionary patents, and reverſionary promiſes of preferments, leaſes upon ſingle lives, and play-debts upon joint lives, and that the perſons ſo aggrieved have no hope of being ſpeedily relieved any other way, than by the diſpenſing of drugs and medicines in the manner they now are, burying alive being judged repugnant to the known laws of this kingdom.

That there are many of the deceaſed, who by certain mechanical motions and powers are carried about town, who would have been put into our hands long before this time by any other well-ordered government: by want of a due police in this particular our company have been great ſufferers.

That frequent funerals contribute to preſerve the genealogies of families, and the honours conferred by the crown, which are no-where ſo well illuſtrated as on this ſolemn occaſion; to maintain neceſſitous clergy; to enable the clerks to appear in decent habits to officiate on Sundays; to feed the great retinue of ſober and melancholy men, who appear at the ſaid funerals, and who muſt ſtarve without conſtant and regular employment. Moreover we deſire it may be remembered, that by the paſſing of this bill the nobility and gentry will have their old coaches lie upon their hands, which are now employed by our company.

And we further hope, that frequent funerals will not not be diſcouraged, as is by this bill propoſed, it being the only method left of carrying ſome people to church.

We are afraid, that by the hardſhips of this bill our company will be reduced to leave their buſineſs here, and practiſe at York and Briſtol, where the free uſe of bad medicines will be ſtill allowed.

It is therefore hoped, that no ſpecious pretence whatſoever will be thought ſufficient to introduce an arbitrary and unlimited power for people to live (in defiance of art) as long as they can by the courſe of nature, to the prejudice of our company, and the decay of trade.

That, as our company are like to ſuffer in ſome meaſure by the power given to phyſicians to diſſect the bodies of malefactors, we humbly hope, that the manufacture of caſes for ſkeletons will be reſerved ſolely to the coffin-makers.

We likewiſe humbly preſume, that the intereſts of the ſeveral trades and profeſſions, which depend upon ours, may be regarded; ſuch as that of hearſes, coaches, coffins, epitaphs, and bell-ropes, ſtone-cutters, feather-men, and bell-ringers; and eſpecially the manufacturers of crapes; and the makers of ſnuff, who uſe great quantities of old coffins, and who, conſidered in the conſumption of their drugs, employ by far the greateſt number of hands of any manufacture of the kingdom.

To the Right Honourable

The MAYOR and ALDERMEN of the City of LONDON.

THE HUMBLE PETITION

OF THE

Colliers, cooks, cook-maids, blackſmiths, jack-makers, braſiers, and others,

SHEWETH,

THAT whereas certain virtuoſi, diſſaffected to the government, and to the trade and proſperity of this kingdom, taking upon them the name and title of the Catoptrical Victuallers, have preſumed by gathering, breaking, folding, and bundling up the ſun-beams by the help of certain glaſſes to make, produce, and kindle up ſeveral new focus's or fires within theſe his majeſty's dominions, and thereby to boil, bake, ſtew, fry, and dreſs all ſorts of victuals and proviſions, to brew, diſtil ſpirits, ſmelt ore, and in general to perform all the offices of culinary fires; and are endeavouring to procure to themſelves the monopoly of this their ſaid invention. We beg leave humbly to repreſent to your honours,

That

That ſuch grant or patent will utterly ruin and reduce to beggary your petitioners, their wives, children, ſervants, and trades on them depending; there being nothing left to them, after the ſaid invention, but warming of cellars and dreſſing of ſuppers in the winter-time. That the aboliſhing ſo conſiderable a branch of the coaſting-trade, as that of the colliers, will deſtroy the navigation of this kingdom. That whereas the ſaid catoptrical victuallers talk of making uſe of the moon by night, as of the ſun by day, they will utterly ruin the numerous body of tallow-chandlers, and impair a very conſiderable branch of the revenue, which ariſes from the tax upon tallow and candles.

That the ſaid catoptrical victuallers do profane the emanations of that glorious luminary the ſun, which is appointed to rule the day, and not to roaſt mutton. And we humbly conceive, it will be found contrary to the known laws of this kingdom, to confine, foreſtall, and monopolize the beams of the ſun. And whereas the ſaid catoptrical victuallers have undertaken by burning glaſſes made of ice to roaſt an ox upon the Thames next winter: we conceive all ſuch practices to be an encroachment upon the rights and privileges of the company of watermen.

That the diverſity of expoſition of the ſeveral kitchens in this great city, whereby ſome receive the rays of the ſun ſooner, and others later, will occaſion great irregularity as to the time of dining of the ſeveral inhabitants, and conſequently great uncertainty and confuſion in the diſpatch of buſineſs: and to thoſe, who by reaſon of their northern expoſition will be ſtill forced to be at the expences of culinary fires, it will reduce

reduce the price of their manufacture to ſuch inequality, as is inconſiſtent with common juſtice: and the ſame inconveniency will affect landlords in the value of their rents.

That the uſe of the ſaid glaſſes will oblige cooks, and cook-maids, to ſtudy opticks and aſtronomy, in order to know the due diſtances of the ſaid focus's or fires, and to adjuſt the poſition of their glaſſes to the ſeveral altitudes of the ſun, varying according to the hours of the day, and the ſeaſons of the year; which ſtudies, at theſe years, will be highly troubleſome to the ſaid cooks and cook-maids, not to ſay any thing of the utter incapacity of ſome of them to go through with ſuch difficult arts; or (which is ſtill a greater inconvenience) it will throw the whole art of cookery into the hands of aſtronomers and glaſs-grinders, perſons utterly unſkilled in other parts of that profeſſion, to the great detriment of the health of his majeſty's good ſubjects.

That it is known by experience, that meat roaſted with ſun-beams is extremely unwholeſome; witneſs ſeveral that have died ſuddenly after eating the proviſions of the ſaid catoptrical victuallers; foraſmuch as the ſun-beams taken inwardly render the humours too hot and aduſt, occaſion great ſweatings, and dry up the rectual moiſture.

That ſun-beams taken inwardly ſhed a malignant influence upon the brain by their natural tendency towards the moon; and produce madneſs and diſtraction at the time of the full moon. That the conſtant uſe of ſo great quantities of this inward light will occaſion the growth of quakeriſm to the danger of the church, and of poetry to the danger of the ſtate.

That the influences of the conſtellations, through which the ſun paſſes, will with his beams be conveyed into the blood; and, when the ſun is among the horned ſigns, may produce ſuch a ſpirit of unchaſtity, as is dangerous to the honour of your worſhips families.

That mankind living much upon the ſeeds and other parts of plants, theſe being impregnated with the ſun-beams, may vegetate and grow in the bowels, a thing of more dangerous conſequence to human bodies than breeding of worms; and this will fall heavieſt upon the poor, who live upon roots; and the weak and ſickly, who live upon barley and rice-gruel, etc. for which we are ready to produce to your honours the opinions of eminent phyſicians, that the taſte and property of the victuals is much altered to the worſe by the ſaid ſolar cookery, the fricaſſés being deprived of the haut-gout they acquire by being dreſſed over charcoal.

Laſtly, Should it happen, by an eclipſe of an extraordinary length, that this city ſhould be deprived of the ſun-beams for ſeveral months; how will his majeſty's ſubjects ſubſiſt in the interim, when common cookery, with the arts depending upon it, is totally loſt?

In conſideration of theſe, and many other inconveniencies, your petitioners humbly pray, that your honours would either totally prohibit the confining and manufacturing the ſun-beams for any of the uſeful purpoſes of life, or in the enſuing parliament procure a tax to be laid upon them, which may anſwer both the duty and price of coals, and which we humbly conceive cannot be leſs than thirty ſhillings per yard ſquare, reſerving the ſole right and privilege of the catoptrical cookery to the royal ſociety, and to the commanders and crew of the bomb-veſſels, under the direction of Mr. Whiſton for finding out the longitude, who, by reaſon of the remoteneſs of their ſtations, may be reduced to ſtreights for want of firing.

And we likewiſe beg, that your honours, as to the forementioned points, would hear the reverend Mr. Flamſtead, who is the legal officer appointed by the government to look after the heavenly luminaries, whom we have conſtituted our truſty and learned ſollicitor.

It cannot rain but it pours,

An ACCOUNT of the arrival of a White Bear, at the houſe of Mr. Ratcliff in Biſhopſgate-ſtreet: as alſo of Fauſtina, the celebrated italian ſinging-woman; and of the copper-farthing dean from Ireland.

AND LASTLY,

Of the wonderful Wild Man that was nurſed in the woods of Germany by a wild beaſt, hunted and taken in toyls; how he behaveth himſelf like a dumb creature, and is a Chriſtian like one of us, being called Peter; and how he was brought to court all in green, to the great aſtoniſhment of the quality and gentry, 1726.

WE ſhall begin with a deſcription of Peter the ſavage, deferring our other curioſities to ſome following papers.

Romulus and Remus, the two famous wild men of antiquity, and Orſin that of the moderns, have been juſtly the admiration of all mankind: nor can we preſage leſs of this wild youth, as may be gathered from that famous and well known prophecy of Lilly's, which, being now accompliſhed, is moſt eaſily interpreted:

When Rome ſhall wend to Benevento,
And Eſpagne break the Aſſiento;
When eagle ſplit ſhall fly to China,
And chriſtian folks adore Fauſtina:
Then ſhall an oak be brought to bed
Of creature neither taught nor fed;
Great feats ſhall he atchieve ——

The pope is now going to Benevento; the Spaniards have broke their treaty; the emperor trades to China; and Lilly, were he alive, muſt be convinced, that it was not the empreſs Fauſtina, that was meant in the prophecy.

It is evident, by ſeveral tokens about this wild gentleman, that he had a father and mother like one of us; but, there being no regiſter of his chriſtening, his age is only to be gueſſed at by his ſtature and countenance, and appeareth to be about twelve or thirteen. His being ſo young was the occaſion of the great diſappointment of the ladies, who came to the drawing-room in full expectation of ſome attempt upon their chaſtity: ſo far is true, that he endeavoured to kiſs the young lady Walpole, who for that reaſon is become the envy of the circle; this being a declaration of nature in favour of her ſuperior beauty.

Ariſtotle ſaith, that man is the moſt mimick of all animals; which opinion of that great philoſopher is ſtrongly ſtrongly confirmed by the behaviour of this wild gentleman, who is endowed with that quality to an extreme degree. He received his firſt impreſſions at court: his manners are firſt to lick people's hands, and then turn his breech upon them; to thruſt his hand into every body's pocket; to climb over people's heads; and even to make uſe of the royal hand to take what he has a mind to. At his firſt appearance he ſeized on the lord chamberlain's ſtaff, and put on his hat before the king; from whence ſome have conjectured, that he is either deſcended from a grandee of Spain, or the earls of Kingſale in Ireland. However, theſe are manifeſt tokens of his innate ambition; he is extremely tenacious of his own property, and ready to invade that of other people. By this mimick quality he diſcovered what wild beaſt had nurſed him: obſerving children to aſk bleſſing of their mothers, one day he fell down upon his knees to a ſow, and muttered ſome ſounds in that humble poſture.

It has been commonly thought, that he is Ulrick's natural brother, becauſe of ſome reſemblance of manners, and the officious care of Ulrick about him; but the ſuperiority of parts and genius in Peter demonſtrates this to be impoſſible.

Though he is ignorant both of ancient and modern languages, (that care being left to the ingenious phyſician, who is entruſted with his education) yet he diſtinguiſhes objects by certain ſounds framed to himſelf, which Mr. Rotenberg, who brought him over, underſtands perfectly. Beholding one day the ſhambles with great fear and aſtoniſhment, ever ſince he calls man by the ſame ſound, which expreſſeth wolf.

A young lady is a peacock, old women magpyes and owls; a beau with a toupee, a monkey; glaſs, ice; blue, red, and green ribbons, he calls rainbow; an heap of gold, a turd. The firſt ſhip he ſaw he took to be a great beaſt ſwimming on her back, and her feet tied above her: the men, that came out of the hold, he took to be her cubs, and wondered they were ſo unlike their dam. He underſtands perfectly the language of all beaſts and birds, and is not, like them, confined to that of one ſpecies. He can bring any beaſt what he calls for, and no doubt is much miſſed now in his native woods, where he uſed to do good offices among his fellow-citizens, and ſerved as a mediator to reconcile their differences. One day he warned a flock of ſheep, that were driving to the ſhambles, of their danger; and, upon uttering ſome ſounds, they all fled. He takes vaſt pleaſure in converſation with horſes; and, going to the Meuſe to converſe with two of his intimate acquaintances in the king's ſtables, as he paſſed by, he neighed to the horſe at Charing-croſs, being as it were ſurprized to ſee him ſo high: he ſeemed to take it ill, that the horſe did not anſwer him; but I think no-body can undervalue his underſtanding for not being ſkilled in ſtatuary.

He expreſſeth his joy moſt commonly by neighing; and, whatever the philoſophers may talk of their riſibility, neighing is a more noble expreſſion of that paſſion than laughing, which ſeems to me to have ſomething ſilly in it; and, beſides, is often attended with tears. Other animals are ſenſible they debaſe themſelves by mimicking laughter; and I take it to be a general obſervation, that the top felicity of mankind is to imitate monkeys and birds; witneſs Harlequins, Scaramouches, and maſqueraders: on the other hand, monkeys, when they would look extremely ſilly, endeavour to bring themſelves down to mankind. Love he expreſſeth by the cooing of a dove, and anger by the croaking of a raven; and it is not doubted, but that he will ſerve in time as an interpreter between us and other animals.

Great inſtruction is to be had from this wild youth in the knowledge of ſimples; and I am of opinion, that he ought always to attend the cenſors of the college in their viſitation of apothecaries ſhops.

I am told, that the new * ſect of herb-eaters intend to follow him into the fields, or to beg him for a clerk of their kitchen; and that there are many of them now thinking of turning their children into woods to graze with the cattle, in hopes to raiſe a healthy and moral race, refined from the corruptions of this luxurious world.

He ſings naturally ſeveral pretty tunes of his own compoſing, and with equal facility in the chromatick, inharmonick, and diatonick ſtile, and conſequently muſt be of infinite uſe to the academy in judging of the merits of their compoſers, and is the only perſon that ought to decide betwixt † Cuzzoni and Fauſtina.

I cannot omit his firſt notion of cloaths, which he took to be the natural ſkins of the creatures that wore them, and ſeemed to be in great pain for the pulling off a ſtocking, thinking the poor man was a flaying.

I am not ignorant, that there are diſaffected people,

ple, who ſay he is a pretender, and no genuine wild man. This calumny proceeds from the falſe notions they have of wild men, which they frame from ſuch as they ſee about the town, whoſe actions are rather abſurd than wild; therefore it will be incumbent on all young gentlemen, who are ambitious to excel in this character, to copy this true original of nature.

The ſenſes of this wild man are vaſtly more acute, than thoſe of a tame one; he can follow the track of a man, or any other beaſt of prey. A dog is an aſs to him for finding trouſles; his hearing is more perfect, becauſe, his ears not having been confined by bandages, he can move them like a drill, and turn them towards the ſonorous object.

Let us pray the Creator of all beings, wild and tame, that as this wild youth by being brought to court has been made a chriſtian; ſo ſuch as are at court, and are no chriſtians, may lay aſide their ſavage and rapacious nature, and return to the meekneſs of the goſpel.

THE

THE NARRATIVE OF Dr. ROBERT NORRIS, CONCERNING The ſtrange and deplorable frenſy of Mr. JOHN DENNIS, an officer of the cuſtom-houſe.

Written in 1713 †.

IT is an acknowledged truth, that nothing is ſo dear to an honeſt man as his good name, nor ought he to neglect the juſt vindication of his character, when it is injuriouſly attacked by any man. The perſon I have at preſent cauſe to complain of, is indeed in very melancholy circumſtances, it having pleaſed God to deprive him of his ſenſes, which may extenuate the crime in him. But I ſhould be wanting in my duty, not only to myſelf, but alſo to my fellow-creatures, to whom my talents may prove of benefit,

† The hiſtory of Mr. Dennis is to be ſeen in Jacob's Lives of the poets; or in Mr. Pope's Dunciad, among the notes upon which the curious reader may find ſome extracts from his writings. The occaſion of this narrative ſufficiently appears from the doctor's own words.

ſhould I ſuffer my profeſſion or honeſty to be undeſervedly aſperſed. I have therefore reſolved to give the publick an account of all, that has paſſed between the unhappy gentleman and myſelf.

On the 20*th* inſtant, while I was in my cloſet pondering the caſe of one of my patients, I heard a knocking at my door, upon opening of which entered an old woman with tears in her eyes, and told me, that without my aſſiſtance her maſter would be utterly ruined. I was forced to interrupt her ſorrow by enquiring her maſter's name and place of abode. She told me, he was one Mr. Dennis, an officer of the cuſtom-houſe, who was taken ill of a violent frenzy laſt April, and had continued in thoſe melancholy circumſtances with few or no intervals. Upon this I aſked her ſome queſtions relating to his humour and extravagancies, that I might the better know under what regimen to put him, when the cauſe of his diſtemper was found out. Alas, ſir, ſays ſhe, this day fortnight in the morning a poor ſimple child came to him from the printer's; the boy had no ſooner entered the room, but he cried out, the devil was come. He often ſtares ghaſtfully, raves aloud, and mutters between his teeth the word Cator, or Cato, or ſome ſuch thing. Now, doctor, this Cator is certainly a witch, and my poor maſter is under an evil tongue: for I have heard him ſay Cator has bewitched the whole nation. It pitied my very heart to think, that a man of my maſter's underſtanding and great ſcholarſhip, who, as the child told me, had a book of his own in print, ſhould talk ſo outrageouſly. Upon this I went and laid out a groat for a horſe-ſhoe, which is at this time nailed on the threſhold of his door; but I don't find my maſter is at all the better for it; he perpetually ſtarts and runs to the window when any one knocks, crying out, 'Sdeath! a meſſenger from the french king! I ſhall die in the baſtile.

Having ſaid this, the old woman preſented me with a vial of his urine; upon examination of which I perceived the whole temperament of his body to be exceeding hot. I therefore inſtantly took my cane and my beaver, and repaired to the place where he dwelt.

When I came to his lodgings near Charing-croſs, up three pair of ſtairs, (which I ſhould not have publiſhed in this manner, but that this lunatic conceals the place of his reſidence on purpoſe to prevent the good offices of thoſe charitable friends and phyſicians, who might attempt his cure) when I came into the room, I found this unfortunate gentleman ſeated on his bed, with Mr. Bernard Lintot bookſeller on the one ſide of him, and a grave elderly gentleman on the other, who, as I have ſince learned, calls himſelf a grammarian; the latitude of whoſe countenance was not a little eclipſed by the fulneſs of his peruke. As I am a black lean man, of a pale viſage, and hang my clothes on ſomewhat ſlovenly, I no ſooner went in, but he frowned upon me, and cried out with violence, "S'death, a frenchman! I am betrayed to the "tyrant! who could have thought the queen would "have delivered me up to France in this treaty, and "leaſt of all that you, my friends, would have been "in a conſpiracy againſt me?"——Sir, ſaid I, here is neither plot nor conſpiracy, but for your advantage.

The

The recovery of your ſenſes requires my attendance, and your friends ſent for me on no other account. I then took a particular ſurvey of his perſon, and the furniture and diſpoſition of his apartment. His aſpect was furious, his eyes were rather fiery than lively, which he rolled about in an uncommon manner. He often opened his mouth, as if he would have uttered ſome matter of importance, but the ſound ſeemed loſt inwardly. His beard was grown, which they told me he would not ſuffer to be ſhaved, believing the modern dramatick poets had corrupted all the barbers in the town to take the firſt opportunity of cutting his throat. His eye-brows were grey, long, and grown together, which he knit with indignation, when any thing was ſpoken, inſomuch that he ſeemed not to have ſmoothed his forehead for many years. His flannel night-cap, which was exceedingly begrimed with ſweat and dirt, hung upon his left ear; the flap of his breeches dangled between his legs, and the rolls of his ſtockings fell down to his ankles.

I obſerved his room was hung with old tapeſtry, which had ſeveral holes in it, cauſed, as the old woman informed me, by his having cut out of it the heads of divers tyrants, the fierceneſs of whoſe viſages had much provoked him. On all ſides of his room were pinned a great many ſheets of a tragedy called Cato, with notes on the margin with his own hand. The words abſurd, monſtrous, execrable, were everywhere written in ſuch large characters, that I could read them without my ſpectacles. By the fire-ſide lay three farthings-worth of ſmall-coal in a Spectator, and behind the door huge heaps of papers of the ſame title, title, which his nurſe informed me ſhe had conveyed thither out of his ſight, believing they were books of the black art; for her maſter never read in them, but was either quite moped, or in raving fits. There was nothing neat in the whole room, except ſome books on his ſhelves very well bound and gilded, whoſe names I had never before heard of, nor I believe were any where elſe to be found; ſuch as Gibraltar, a comedy; Remarks on prince Arthur; The grounds of criticiſm in poetry; An eſſay on publick ſpirit. The only one I had any knowledge of was a Paradiſe loſt, interleaved. The whole floor was covered with manuſcripts, as thick as a paſtry-cook's ſhop on a Chriſtmas eve. On his tables were ſome ends of verſe and of candles; a gallipot of ink with a yellow pen in it, and a pot of half dead ale covered with a Longinus.

As I was caſting my eyes round on all this odd furniture with ſome earneſtneſs and aſtoniſhment, and in a profound ſilence, I was on a ſudden ſurprized to hear the man ſpeak in the following manner:

"Beware, doctor, that it fare not with you as "with your predeceſſor the famous Hippocrates, whom "the miſtaken citizens of Abdera ſent for in this very "manner to cure the philoſoper Democritus; he re-"turned full of admiration at the wiſdom of that per-"ſon, whom he had ſuppoſed a lunatick. Behold, "doctor, it was thus Ariſtotle himſelf and all the great "ancients ſpent their days and nights, wrapt up in "criticiſm, and beſet all around with their own wri-"tings. As for me, whom you ſee in the ſame man-"ner, be aſſured I have none other diſeaſe, than a

"ſwelling

" ſwelling in my legs, whereof I ſay no more, ſince " your art may further certify you."

I began now to be in hopes, that his caſe had been miſrepreſented, and that he was not ſo far gone, but ſome timely medicines might recover him. I therefore proceeded to the proper queries, which, with the anſwers made to me, I ſhall ſet down in form of a dialogue, in the very words they were ſpoken, becauſe I would not omit the leaſt circumſtance in this narrative; and I call my conſcience to witneſs, as if upon oath, that I ſhall tell the truth without addition or diminution.

Dr. Pray, ſir, how did you contract this ſwelling?

Denn. By a criticiſm.

Dr. A criticiſm! that's a diſtemper I never read of.

Denn. S'death, ſir, a diſtemper! It is no diſtemper, but a noble art. I have ſat fourteen hours a day at it; and are you a doctor, and don't know there's a communication between the legs and the brain?

Dr. What made yon ſit ſo many hours, ſir?

Denn. Cato, ſir.

Dr. Sir, I ſpeak of your diſtemper; what gave you this tumour?

Denn. Cato, Cato, Cato *.

Old Wom. For God's ſake, doctor, name not this evil ſpirit; 'tis the whole cauſe of his madneſs: alas, poor maſter's juſt falling into his fits.

Mr. Lintot. Fits! Z—— what fits! A man may well have ſwellings in his legs, that ſits writing fourteen hours in a day. He got his by the Remarks.

Dr. The Remarks! what are thoſe?

* Remarks on Cato, publiſhed by Mr. D. in the year 1712.

Denn.

Denn. S'Death! have you never read my Remarks? I will be damned, if this dog Lintot ever publiſhed my advertiſements.

Mr. Lintot. Z——! I publiſhed advertiſement upon advertiſement; and if the book be not read, it is none of my fault, but his that made it. By G—, as much has been done for the book, as could be done for any book in Chriſtendom.

Dr. We do not talk of books, ſir; I fear thoſe are the fuel that feed his delirium, mention them no more. You do very ill to promote this diſcourſe.

I deſire a word in private with this other gentleman, who ſeems a grave and ſenſible man: I ſuppoſe, ſir, you are his apothecary.

Gent. Sir, I am his friend.

Dr. I doubt it not. What regimen have you obſerved, ſince he has been under your care? You remember, I ſuppoſe, the paſſage of Celſus, which ſays, if the patient on the third day have an interval, ſuſpend the medicaments at night? Let fumigations be uſed to corroborate the brain. I hope you have upon no account promoted ſternutation by hellebore.

Gent. Sir, no ſuch matter, you utterly miſtake.

Dr. Miſtake: am I not a phyſician? and ſhall an apothecary diſpute my noſtrums?——You may perhaps have filled up a preſcription or two of Ratcliff's which chanced to ſucceed, and with that very preſcription, injudiciouſly preſcribed to different conſtitutions, have deſtroyed a multitude. Pharmacopola componat, medicus ſolus præſcribat. Fumigate him, I ſay, this very evening, while he is relieved by an interval.

Denn. S'death, ſir, my friend an apothecary! a baſe mechanic; He, who like myſelf, profeſſes the nobleſt ſciences in the univerſe, criticiſm and poetry! Can you think I would ſubmit my writings to the judgment of an apothecary! By the immortals, he himſelf inſerted three whole paragraphs in my Remarks, had a hand in my Publick ſpirit, nay, aſſiſted me in my deſcription of the furies and infernal regions in my Appius.

Mr. Lintot. He is an author; you miſtake the gentleman, doctor; he has been an author theſe twenty years, to his bookſeller's knowledge, and no man's elſe.

Denn. Is all the town in a combination? Shall poetry fall to the ground? Muſt our reputation be loſt to all foreign countries? O deſtruction! perdition! * Opera! Opera! As poetry once raiſed cities, ſo, when poetry fails, cities are overturned, and the world is no more.

Dr. He raves, he raves; Mr. Lintot, I pray you pinion down his arms, that he may do no miſchief.

Denn. O I am ſick, ſick to death!

Dr. That is a good ſymptom, a very good ſymptom. To be ſick to death (ſay the modern phyſicians) is an excellent ſymptom. When a patient is ſenſible of his pain, 'tis half a cure. Pray, ſir, of what are you ſick?

Denn. Of every thing, of every thing. I am ſick of the ſentiments, of the diction, of the protaſis, of the epitaſis, and the cataſtrophe. —— Alas, what is become of the drama, the drama?

* He wrote a treatiſe proving the decay of publick ſpirit to proceed from italian opera's.

Old

Old Wom. The dram, ſir? Mr. Lintot drank up all the gin juſt now; but I'll go fetch more preſently!

Denn. O ſhameful want, ſcandalous omiſſion! By all the immortals, here is no peripætia, no change of fortune in the tragedy; Z—— no change at all!

Old Wom. Pray, good ſir, be not angry, I'll fetch change.

Dr. Hold your peace, woman; his fit increaſes; good Mr. Lintot hold him.

Mr. Lintot. Plague on't! I am damnably afraid, they are in the right of it, and he is mad in earneſt. If he ſhould be really mad, who the devil will buy the Remarks?

[Here Mr. Lintot ſcratched his head.]

Dr. Sir, I ſhall order you the cold-bath to-morrow——Mr. Lintot, you are a ſenſible man; pray ſend for Mr. Verdier's ſervant, and as you are a friend to the patient, be ſo kind as to ſtay this evening whilſt he is cupped on the head. The ſymptoms of his madneſs ſeem to be deſperate; for Avicen ſays, that if learning be mixed with a brain, that is not of a contexture fit to receive it, the brain ferments, till it be totally exhauſted. We muſt eradicate theſe undigeſted ideas out of the pericranium, and reduce the patient to a competent knowledge of himſelf.

Denn. Caitiffs ſtand off, unhand me, miſcreants! Is the man, whoſe whole endeavours are to bring the town to reaſon, mad? Is the man, who ſettles poetry on the baſis of antiquity, mad? Dares any one aſſert, there is a peripætia in that vile piece, that's foiſted upon the town for a dramatick poem? That man is mad, the town is mad, the world is mad. See Longinus in my right hand, and Ariſtotle in my left; I am the only man among the moderns that ſupport them. Am I to be aſſaſſinated; and ſhall a bookſeller, who hath lived upon my labours, take away that life, to which he owes his ſupport?

Gent. By your leave, gentlemen, I apprehend you not. I muſt not ſee my friend ill treated; he is no more affected with lunacy than myſelf: I am alſo of the ſame opinion as to the peripætia.———Sir, by the gravity of your countenance and habit, I ſhould conceive you to be a graduate phyſician; but, by your indecent and boiſterous treatment of this man of learning, I perceive you are a violent ſort of perſon, I am loth to ſay quack, who, rather than his drugs ſhould lie upon his own hands, would get rid of them by cramming them into the mouths of others: the gentleman is of good condition, ſound intellectuals, and unerring judgment: I beg you will not oblige me to reſent theſe proceedings.

THESE were all the words that paſſed among us at this time; nor was there need for more, it being neceſſary we ſhould make uſe of force in the cure of my patient.

I privately whiſpered the old woman to go to Mr. Verdier's in Long-Acre, with orders to come immediately with cupping-glaſſes; in the mean time, by the aſſiſtance of Mr. Lintot, we locked his friend into a cloſet, who 'tis plain from his laſt ſpeech was likewiſe touched in his intellects, after which we bound our lunatick hand and foot down to the bedſtead, where he continued in violent ravings, notwithſtanding the moſt moſt tender expreſſions we could uſe to perſuade him to ſubmit to the operation, till the ſervant of Verdier arrived. He had no ſooner clapped half a dozen cupping-glaſſes on his head, and behind his ears, but the gentleman above-mentioned, burſting open the cloſet, ran furiouſly upon us, cut Mr. Dennis's bandages, and let drive at us with a vaſt folio, which ſorely bruiſed the ſhin of Mr. Lintot; Mr. John Dennis alſo, ſtarting up with the cupping-glaſſes on his head, ſeized another folio, and with the ſame dangerouſly wounded me in the ſkull, juſt above my right temple. The truth of this fact Mr. Verdier's ſervant is ready to atteſt upon oath, who, taking an exact ſurvey of the volumes, found that, which wounded my head, to be Fruterus's Lampas Critica, and that, which broke Mr. Lintot's ſhin, was Scaliger's Poetices. After this Mr. John Dennis, ſtrengthened at once by rage and madneſs, ſnatched up a peruke-block, that ſtood by the bedſide, and wielded it round in ſo furious a manner, that he broke three of the cupping-glaſſes from the crown of his head. So that much blood trickled down his viſage.——He looked ſo ghaſtly, and his paſſion was grown to ſuch a prodigious heighth, that myſelf, Mr. Lintot, and Verdier's ſervant were obliged to leave the room in all the expedition imaginable.

I took Mr. Lintot home with me, in order to have our wounds dreſt, and laid hold of that opportunity of entering into diſcourſe with him about the madneſs of this perſon, of whom he gave me the following remarkable relation:

That on the 17th of May, 1712, between the hours of ten and eleven in the morning, Mr. John Dennis entered into his ſhop, and opening one of the volumes of the Spectator, in the large paper, did ſuddenly, without the leaſt provocation, tear out that of No. —— where the author treats of poetical juſtice, and caſt it into the ſtreet. That the ſaid Mr. John Dennis, on the 27th of March, 1712, finding, on the ſaid Mr. Lintot's counter, a book called an Eſſay on criticiſm, juſt then publiſhed, he read a page or two with much frowning, till coming to theſe two lines;

Some have at firſt for wits, then poets paſt,
Turn'd criticks next, and prov'd plain fools at laſt.

He flung down the book in a terrible fury, and cried out, By G—d he means me.

That being in his company on a certain time, when Shakeſpear was mentioned, as of a contrary opinion to Mr. Dennis, he ſwore the ſaid Shakeſpear was a raſcal, with other defamatory expreſſions, which gave Mr. Lintot a very ill opinion of the ſaid Shakeſpear.

That, about two months ſince, he came again into the ſhop, and caſt ſeveral ſuſpicious looks on a gentleman that ſtood by him, after which he deſired ſome information concerning that perſon. He was no ſooner acquainted, that the gentleman was a new author, and that his firſt piece was to be publiſhed in a few days, but he drew his ſword upon him, and, had not my ſervant luckily catched him by the ſleeve, I might have loſt one author upon the ſpot, and another the next ſeſſions.

Upon recollecting all theſe circumſtances, Mr. Lintot was entirely of opinion, that he had been mad for ſome

ſome time; and I doubt not, but this whole narrative muſt ſufficiently convince the world of the exceſs of his frenzy. It now remains, that I give the reaſons which obliged me in my own vindication to publiſh this whole unfortunate tranſaction.

In the firſt place, Mr. John Dennis had induſtriouſly cauſed to be reported, that I entered into his room vi et armis, either out of a deſign to deprive him of his life, or of a new play called Coriolanus, which he has had ready for the ſtage theſe four years.

Secondly, He hath given out about Fleet-ſtreet and the Temple, that I was an accomplice with his bookſeller, who viſited him with intent to take away divers valuable manuſcripts, without paying him copy-money.

Thirdly, He hath told others, that I am no graduate phyſician, and that he had ſeen me upon a mountebank ſtage in Moor-fields, when he had lodgings in the college there.

Fourthly, Knowing that I had much practice in the city, he reported at the Royal Exchange, Cuſtom-houſe, and other places adjacent, that I was a foreign ſpy, employed by the french king to convey him into France; that I bound him hand and foot; and that, if his friend had not burſt from his confinement to his relief, he had been at this hour in the Baſtile.

All which ſeveral aſſertions of his are ſo very extravagant, as well as inconſiſtent, that I appeal to all mankind, whether this perſon be not out of his ſenſes. I ſhall not decline giving and producing further proofs of this truth in open court, if he drives the matter ſo far. In the mean time I heartily forgive him, and pray that the Lord may reſtore him to the full enjoyment of his underſtanding: ſo wiſheth, as becometh a Chriſtian,

From my houſe on Snow-hill, July the 30th, 1713.

ACCOUNT

Of a horrid and barbarous

REVENGE BY POISON,

ON THE BODY OF

Mr. EDMUND CURLL,

BOOKSELLER;

With a faithful Copy of his

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT.

HISTORY furniſheth us with examples of many ſatyrical authors, who have fallen ſacrifices to revenge, but not of any bookſellers, that I know of, except the unfortunate ſubject of the following paper; I mean Mr. Edmund Curll at the Bible and Dial in Fleet-ſtreet, who was yeſterday poiſoned by Mr. Pope, after having lived many years an inſtance of the mild temper of the britiſh nation.

Every

Every body knows, that the ſaid Mr. Edmund Curll on Monday the 26th inſtant publiſhed a ſatyrical piece, entitled Court Poems, in the preface whereof they were attributed to a lady of quality, Mr. Pope, or Mr. Gay; by which indiſcreet method, though he had eſcaped one revenge, there were ſtill two behind in reſerve.

Now on the Wedneſday enſuing, between the hours of ten and eleven, Mr. Lintot a neighbouring bookſeller deſired a conference with Mr. Curll about ſettling a title-page, inviting him at the ſame time to take a whet together. Mr. Pope, who is not the only inſtance how perſons of bright parts may be carried away by the inſtigation of the devil, found means to convey himſelf into the ſame room, under pretence of buſineſs with Mr. Lintot, who, it ſeems, is the printer of his Homer. This gentleman with a ſeeming coolneſs reprimanded Mr. Curll for wrongfully aſcribing to him the aforeſaid poems: he excuſed himſelf by declaring, that one of his authors (Mr. Oldmixon by name) gave the copies to the preſs, and wrote the preface. Upon this Mr. Pope, being to all appearance reconciled, very civilly drank a glaſs of ſack to Mr. Curll, which he as civilly pledged; and though the liquor in colour and taſte differed not from common ſack, yet was it plain, by the pangs this unhappy ſtationer felt ſoon after, that ſome poiſonous drug had been ſecretly infuſed therein.

About eleven o'clock he went home, where his wife, obſerving his colour changed, ſaid, "Are you "not ſick, my dear?" He replied, "Bloody ſick;" and incontinently fell a vomiting and ſtraining in an uncommon uncommon and unnatural manner, the contents of his vomiting being as green as graſs. His wife had been juſt reading a book of her huſband's printing concerning Jane Wenham, the famous witch of Hertford, and her mind miſgave her that he was bewitched; but he ſoon let her know, that he ſuſpected poiſon, and recounted to her, between the intervals of his yawnings and retchings, every circumſtance of his interview with Mr. Pope.

Mr. Lintot in the mean time coming in, was extremely affrighted at the ſudden alteration he obſerved in him: "Brother Curll, ſays he, I fear you have got "the vomiting diſtemper; which, I have heard, kills "in half an hour. This comes from your not fol-"lowing my advice, to drink old hock in a morning, "as I do, and abſtain from ſack." Mr. Curll replied "in a moving tone, Your author's ſack, I fear, has "done my buſineſs." Z——ds, ſays Mr. Lintot, my "author!——Why did not you drink old hock?" Notwithſtanding which rough remonſtrance, he did in the moſt friendly manner preſs him to take warm water; but Mr. Curll did with great obſtinacy refuſe it; which made Mr. Lintot infer, that he choſe to die, as thinking to recover greater damages.

All this time the ſymptoms encreaſed violently, with acute pains in the lower belly. "Brother Lintot, "ſays he, I perceive my laſt hour approaching; do "me the friendly office to call my partner, Mr. Pem-"berton, that we may ſettle our worldly affairs." Mr. Lintot, like a kind neighbour, was haſtening out of the room, while Mr. Curll raved aloud in this manner: "If I ſurvive this, I will be revenged on Tonſon;

" it was he firſt detected me as the printer of theſe " poems, and I will reprint theſe very poems in his " name." His wife admoniſhed him not to think of revenge, but to take care of his ſtock and his ſoul: and in the ſame inſtant Mr. Lintot, whoſe goodneſs can never be enough applauded, returned with Mr. Pemberton. After ſome tears jointly ſhed by theſe humane bookſellers, Mr. Curll being, as he ſaid, in his perfect ſenſes, though in great bodily pain, immediately proceeded to make a verbal will, Mrs. Curll, having firſt put on his night-cap, in the following manner:

GENTLEMEN, in the firſt place, I do ſincerely pray forgiveneſs for thoſe indirect methods I have purſued in inventing new titles to old books, putting authors names to things they never ſaw, publiſhing private quarrels for publick entertainment; all which I hope will be pardoned, as being done to get an honeſt livelihood.

I do alſo heartily beg pardon of all perſons of honour, lords ſpiritual and temporal, gentry, burgeſſes, and commonalty, to whoſe abuſe I have any or every way contributed by my publications, particularly, I hope it will be conſidered, that if I have vilified his grace the duke of Marlborough, I have likewiſe aſperſed the late duke of Ormond; if I have abuſed the honourable Mr. Walpole, I have alſo libelled the lord Bolingbroke: ſo that I have preſerved that equality and impartiality, which becomes an honeſt man in times of faction and diviſion.

I call my conſcience to witneſs, that many of theſe things, things, which may ſeem malicious, were done out of charity; I having made it wholly my buſineſs to print for poor diſconſolate authors, whom all other book-ſellers refuſe. Only God bleſs ſir Richard Blackmore! you know he takes no copy-money.

The ſecond collection of poems, which I groundleſly called Mr. Prior's, will ſell for nothing, and hath not yet paid the charge of the advertiſements, which I was obliged to publiſh againſt him: therefore you may as well ſuppreſs the edition, and beg that gentleman's pardon in the name of a dying Chriſtian.

The french Cato, with the criticiſm ſhewing how ſuperior it is to Mr. Addiſon, (which I wickedly aſcribed to madam Dacier) may be ſuppreſſed at a reaſonable rate, being damnably tranſlated.

I proteſt I have no animoſity to Mr. Rowe, having printed part of Callipædia, and an incorrect edition of his poems without his leave in quarto. Mr. Gildon's Rehearſal, or Bays the younger, did more harm to me than to Mr. Rowe; though upon the faith of an honeſt man, I paid him double for abuſing both him and Mr. Pope.

Heaven pardon me for publiſhing the Trials of ſodomy in an Elzevir letter! but I humbly hope, my printing ſir Richard Blackmore's eſſays will atone for them. I beg that you will take what remains of theſe laſt, (which is near the whole impreſſion, preſents excepted) and let my poor widow have in exchange the ſole property of the copy of madam Maſcranny.

[Here Mr. Pemberton interrupted, and would by no means conſent to this article, about which ſome diſpute might might have ariſen unbecoming a dying perſon, if Mr. Lintot had not interpoſed, and Mr. Curll vomited.]

What this poor unfortunate man ſpoke afterwards, was ſo indiſtinct, and in ſuch broken accents (being perpetually interrupted by vomiting) that the reader is entreated to excuſe the confuſion and imperfection of this account.

Dear Mr. Pemberton, I beg you to beware of the indictment at Hicks's-hall for publiſhing Rocheſter's bawdy poems; that copy will otherwiſe be my beſt legacy to my dear wife, and helpleſs child.

The caſe of impotence was my beſt ſupport all the laſt long vacation.

[In this laſt paragraph Mr. Curll's voice grew more free, for his vomitings abated upon his dejections, and he ſpoke what follows from his cloſe-ſtool.]

For the copies of noblemens and biſhops Laſt wills and teſtaments, I ſolemnly declare, I printed them not with any purpoſe of defamation; but merely as I thought thoſe copies lawfully purchaſed from Doctors Commons, at one ſhilling apiece. Our trade in wills turning to ſmall account, we may divide them blindfold.

For Mr. Manwaring's life I aſk Mrs. Oldfield's pardon: neither his nor my lord Hallifax's lives, though they were of ſervice to their country, were of any to me: but I was reſolved, ſince I could not print their works while they lived, to print their lives after they were dead.

While

While he was ſpeaking theſe words Mr. Oldmixon entered. " Ah! Mr. Oldmixon, ſaid poor Mr. Curll, " to what a condition have your works reduced me! " I die a martyr to that unlucky preface. However, " in theſe my laſt moments I will be juſt to all men; " you ſhall have your third ſhare of the Court poems, " as was ſtipulated. When I am dead, where will " you find another bookſeller? Your Proteſtant packet " might have ſupported you, had you writ a little leſs " ſcurrilouſly; there is a mean in all things."

Here Mr. Lintot interrupted: Why not find another bookſeller, brother Curll? and then took Mr. Oldmixon aſide and whiſpered him: " Sir, as ſoon as Curll is " dead, I ſhall be glad to talk with you over a pint " at the Devil."

Mr. Curll now turning to Mr. Pemberton, told him, he had ſeveral taking title-pages, that only wanted treatiſes to be wrote to them; and earneſtly deſired, that when they were written, his heirs might have ſome ſhare of the profit of them.

After he had ſaid this, he fell into horrible gripings, upon which Mr. Lintot adviſed him to repeat the Lord's prayer. He deſired his wife to ſtep into the ſhop for a Common-prayer book, and read it by the help of a candle without heſitation. He cloſed the book, fetched a groan, and recommended to Mrs. Curll to give forty ſhillings to the poor of the pariſh of St. Dunſtan's and a week's wages advance to each of his gentlemen-authors, with ſome ſmall gratuity in particular to Mrs. Centlivre.

The poor man continued for ſome hours with all his diſconſolate family about him in tears, expecting his final diſſolution: when of a ſudden he was ſurpriſingly relieved by a plentiful fœtid ſtool, which obliged them all to retire out of the room. Notwithſtanding, it is judged, by ſir Richard Blackmore, that the poiſon is ſtill latent in his body, and will infallibly deſtroy him by ſlow degrees in leſs than a month. It is to be hoped, the other enemies of this wretched ſtationer will not further purſue their revenge, or ſhorten this ſhort period of his miſerable life.

A FUR-

A FURTHER ACCOUNT

Of the moſt

DEPLORABLE CONDITION

BOOKSELLER.

THE publick is already acquainted with the manner of Mr. Curll's impoiſonment by a faithful, though unpolite hiſtorian of Grub-ſtreet. I am but the continuer of his hiſtory; yet I hope a due diſtinction will be made between an undignified ſcribler of a ſheet and half, and the author of a threepenny ſtitched book, like myſelf.

" * Wit, ſaith ſir Richard Blackmore, proceeds " from a concurrence of regular and exalted ferments, " and an affluence of animal ſpirits rectified and re- " fined to a degree of purity." On the contrary, when the igneous particles riſe with the vital liquor, they produce an abſtraction of the rational part of the ſoul, which we commonly call madneſs. The verity of this hypotheſis is juſtified by the ſymptoms, with which the unfortunate Mr. Edmund Curll, bookſeller, hath been afflicted, ever ſince his ſwallowing the poiſon at the Swan-tavern in Fleet-ſtreet. For though the neck of his retort, which carries up the animal ſpirits to the head, is of an extraordinary length; yet the ſaid animal ſpirits riſe muddy, being contaminated with the inflammable particles of this uncommon poiſon.

* Blackmore's Eſſays, vol. i.

The ſymptoms of his departure from his uſual temper of mind were at firſt only ſpeaking civilly to his cuſtomers, ſingeing a pig with a new-purchaſed libel, and refuſing two-and-nine pence for ſir Richard Blackmore's Eſſays.

As the poor man's frenzy encreaſed, he began to void his excrements in his bed, read Rocheſter's bawdy poems to his wife, gave Oldmixon a ſlap on the chops, and would have kiſſed Mr. Pemberton's A—— by violence.

But at laſt he came to ſuch a paſs, that he would dine upon nothing but copper-plates, took a clyſter for a whipt ſyllabub, and made Mr. Lintot eat a ſuppoſitory for a radiſh with bread and butter.

We leave it to every tender wife to imagine, how ſorely all this afflicted poor Mrs. Curll: at firſt ſhe privately put a bill into ſeveral churches, deſiring the prayers of the congregation for a wretched ſtationer diſtempered in mind. But when ſhe was ſadly convinced, that his misfortune was publick to all the world, ſhe writ the following letter to her good neighbour Mr. Lintot.

A true

A true Copy of Mrs. Curll's letter to Mr. Lintot.

WORTHY Mr. LINTOT,

" YOU and all the neighbours know too well
" the frenzy, with which my poor man is vi" ſited. I never perceived he was out of himſelf, till " that melancholy day, that he thought he was poi-
" ſoned in a glaſs of ſack; upon this he ran a vomit" ing all over the houſe, nay, in the new-waſhed di" ning-room. Alas! this is the greateſt adverſity
" that ever befel my poor man, ſince he loſt one teſ-
" ticle at ſchool by the bite of a black boar. Good " Lord! if he ſhould die, where ſhould I diſpoſe of
" the ſtock? unleſs Mr. Pemberton or you would help
" a diſtreſſed widow: for God knows, he never pub-
" liſhed any books that laſted above a week, ſo
" that if we wanted daily books, we wanted daily
" bread. I can write no more, for I hear the rap of " Mr. Curll's ivory-headed cane upon the counter.
" ——Pray recommend me to your paſtry-cook, who " furniſhes you yearly with tarts in exchange for your " paper, for Mr. Curll has diſobliged ours, ſince his " fits came upon him;——before that, we generally " lived upon baked meats.——He is coming in, and " I have but juſt time to put his ſon out of the way
" for fear of miſchief: ſo, wiſhing you a merry Eaſ-
" ter, I remain your

" Moſt humble ſervant,

" E. CURLL.

" P. S. As to the report of my poor huſband's
" ſtealing o'calf, it is really groundleſs, for he always
" binds in ſheep."

But return we to Mr. Curll, who all Wedneſday continued outrageouſly mad. On Thurſday he had a lucid interval, that enabled him to ſend a general ſummons to all his authors. There was but one porter who could perform this office, to whom he gave the following bill of directions, where to find them. This bill, together with Mrs. Curll's original letter, lie at Mr. Lintot's ſhop to be peruſed by the curious.

Inſtructions to a porter how to find Mr. Curll's authors.

" AT a tallow-chandler's in Petty France, half" way under the blind arch: aſk for the hiſ-
" torian.

" At the Bedſtead and Bolſter, a muſick-houſe in
" Moorfields, two tranſlators in a bed together.

" At the Hercules and Still in Vinegar-yard, a " ſchool-maſter with carbuncles on his noſe.

" At a blackſmith's ſhop in the Friers, a pindarick
" writer in red ſtockings.

" In the calendar-mill-room at Exeter-'change, a " compoſer of meditations.

" At the three Tobacco-pipes in Dog and Bitch yard,
" one that has been a parſon, he wears a blue cam-
" blet coat trimmed with black: my beſt writer
" againſt Revealed Religion.

" At Mr. Summers's a thief-catcher's, in Lewkner's-
" lane, the man that wrote againſt the impiety of Mr.
" Rowe's plays.

" At the farthing-pye-houſe in Tooting-fields, the " young man, who is writing my new Paſtorals.

" At the laundreſſes, at the Hole in the Wall in Curſitors-

" Curſitors-alley, up three pair of ſtairs, the author " of my Church Hiſtory,——if his flux be over—— " you may alſo ſpeak to the gentleman, who lies by " him in the flock-bed, my Index-maker.

" The ‡ cook's wife in Buckingham-court; bid her " bring along with her the ſimilies, that were lent her " for her next new play.

" Call at Budge-row for the gentleman you uſed " to go to in the cock-loft; I have taken away the " ladder, but his landlady has it in keeping.

" I don't much care if you aſk at the Mint for the " old beetle-browed critick, and the purblind poet " at the alley over-againſt St. Andrew's Holbourn. " But this as you have time."

All theſe gentlemen appeared at the hour appointed in Mr. Curll's dining-room, two excepted; one of whom was the gentleman in the cockloft, his landlady being out of the way, and the gradus ad parnaſſum taken down; the other happened to be too cloſely watched by the bailiffs.

They no ſooner entered the room, but all of them ſhewed in their behaviour ſome ſuſpicion of each other; ſome turning away their heads with an air of contempt: others ſquinting with a leer, that ſhewed at once fear and indignation, each with a haggard abſtracted mien, the lively picture of ſcorn, ſolitude, and ſhort commons. So when a keeper feeds his hungry charge of vultures, panthers, and of Libyan leopards, each eyes his fellow with a fiery glare: high hung, the bloody liver tempts their maw. Or as a houſe-wife ſtands before her pales, ſurrounded by her geeſe; they fight, they hiſs, they gaggle, beat their wings, and down is ſcattered as the winter's ſnow, for a poor grain of oat, or tare, or barley. Such looks ſhot through the room tranſverſe, oblique, direct; ſuch was the ſtir and din, till Curll thus ſpoke, (but without riſing from his cloſe-ſtool.)

" Whores and authors muſt be paid beforehand to " put them in good-humour; therefore here is half a " crown apiece for you to drink your own healths, " and confuſion to Mr. Addiſon, and all other ſucceſs-" ful writers.

" Ah gentlemen! what have I not done, what " have I not ſuffered, rather than the world ſhould " be deprived of your lucubrations? I have taken in-" voluntary purges, I have been vomited, three times " have I been caned, once was I hunted, twice " was my head broke by a grenadier, twice was I " toſſed in a blanket; I have had boxes on the ear, " ſlaps on the chops; I have been frighted, pumped, " kicked, ſlandered, and beſhitten.——I hope, gen-" tlemen, you are all convinced that this author of " Mr. Lintot's could mean nothing elſe but ſtarving " you, by poiſoning me. It remains for us to con-" ſult the beſt and ſpeedieſt methods of revenge."

He had ſcarce done ſpeaking, but the hiſtorian propoſed a hiſtory of his life. The Exeter-exchange-gentleman was for penning articles of his faith. Some pretty ſmart pindarick, ſays the red-ſtocking poet, would effectually do his buſineſs. But the index-maker ſaid, there was nothing like an index to his Homer.

After

After ſeveral debates, they came to the following reſolutions:

" Reſolved, That every member of this ſociety, ac" cording to his ſeveral abilities, ſhall contribute ſome
" way or other to the defamation of Mr. Pope.

" Reſolved, That towards the libelling of the ſaid
" Pope there be a ſum employed not exceeding ſix " pounds ſixteen ſhillings and nine pence (not inclu" ding advertiſements.)

" Reſolved, That he has on purpoſe, in ſeveral
" paſſages, perverted the true ancient Heathen ſenſe
" of Homer, for the more effectual propagation of the " Popiſh religion.

" Reſolved, That the printing of Homer's battles at " this juncture has been the occaſion of all the diſ-
" turbances of this kingdom.

" Ordered, That Mr. ‡ Barnivelt be invited to be " a member of this ſociety, in order to make further
" diſcoveries.

" Reſolved, That a number of effective errata's be " raiſed out of Pope's Homer (not exceeding 1746)
" and that every gentleman, who ſhall ſend in one
" error, for his encouragement ſhall have the whole
" works of this ſociety gratis.

" Reſolved, That a ſum not exceeding ten-ſhillings
" and ſix-pence be diſtributed among the members

" Reſolved, That towards the further leſſening the " character of the ſaid Pope, ſome perſons be deputed " to abuſe him at ladies tea-tables, and that, in con- " ſideration our authors are not well dreſſed enough, " Mr. C——y and Mr. Ke——l be deputed for that " ſervice.

" Reſolved, That a ballad be made againſt Mr. Pope, " and that Mr. * Oldmixon, Mr. † Gildon, and Mrs. " ‡ Centlivre, do prepare and bring in the ſame.

" Reſolved, That, above all, ſome effectual ways " and means be found to encreaſe the joint ſtock of " the reputation of this ſociety, which at preſent is " exceeding low, and to give their works the greater " currency; whether by raiſing the denomination of " the ſaid works by counterfeit title-pages, or mixing " a greater quantity of the fine metal of other authors " with the alloy of this ſociety.

" Reſolved, That no member of this ſociety for " the future mix ſtout in his ale in a morning, and " that Mr. B—— remove from the Hercules and " Still.

" Reſolved, That all our members (except the

* Oldmixon was all his life a party-writer for hire: and, after having falſified Daniel's Chronicle in many places, he charged three eminent perſons with falſifying lord Clarendon's Hiſtory, which was diſproved by Dr. Atterbury, biſhop of Rocheſter, the only ſurvivor of them.

† Gildon, a writer of criticiſms and libels, who abuſed Mr. Pope in ſeveral pamphlets and books printed by Curll.

‡ Mrs. Suſannah Centlivre, wife of Mr. Centlivre, yeoman of the mouth to his majeſty, wrote a ſong before ſhe was ſeven years old, and many plays: ſhe wrote alſo a ballad againſt Mr. Pope's Homer, before he began it.

" Reſolved, That ſir * Richard Blackmore be ap- " pointed to endue this ſociety with a large quantity " of regular and exalted ferments, in order to enliven " their cold ſentiments (being his true receipt to make " wits †.)"

Theſe reſolutions being taken, the aſſembly was ready to break up, but they took ſo near a part in Mr. Curll's afflictions, that none of them could leave him without giving him ſome advice to reinſtate him in his health.

Mr. Gildon was of opinion, That, in order to drive a Pope out of his belly, he ſhould get the mummy of ſome deceaſed moderator of the general aſſembly in Scotland to be taken inwardly as an effectual antidote againſt Antichriſt; but Mr. Oldmixon did conceive, that the liver of the perſon who adminiſtered the poiſon, boiled in broth, would be a more certain cure.

While the company were expecting the thanks of Mr. Curll for theſe demonſtrations of their zeal, a whole pile of ſir Richard's Eſſays on a ſudden fell on his head; the ſhock of which in an inſtant brought back his delirium. He immediately roſe up, overturned the cloſe-ſtool, and beſh-t the Eſſays (which may probably occaſion a ſecond edition) then, without putting up his breeches, in a moſt furious tone he thus broke out to his books, which his diſtempered imagination repreſented to him as alive, coming down from their ſhelves, fluttering their leaves, and flapping their covers at him.

Now G—d damn all folio's, quarto's, octavo's, and duodecimo's! ungrateful varlets that you are, who have ſo long taken up my houſe without paying for your lodging! Are you not the beggarly brood of fumbling journeymen; born in garrets among lice and cobwebs, nurſed up on grey peas, bullocks liver, and porters ale?——Was not the firſt light you ſaw the farthing candle I paid for? Did you not come before your time into dirty ſheets of brown paper?——And have not I clothed you in double royal, lodged you handſomely on decent ſhelves, laced your backs with gold, equipt you with ſplendid titles, and ſent you into the world with the names of perſons of quality? Muſt I be always plagued with you? Why flutter ye your leaves, and flap your covers at me? Damn ye all, ye wolves in ſheeps cloathing; rags ye were, and to rags ye ſhall return. Why hold you forth your texts to me, ye paltry ſermons? Why cry ye—at every word to me, ye bawdy poems?—To my ſhop at Tunbridge ye ſhall go, by G—d, and thence be drawn like the reſt of your predeceſſors, bit by bit, to the paſſage-houſe; for in this preſent emotion of my bowels, how do I compaſſionate thoſe, who have great need, and nothing to wipe their breech with?

Having ſaid this, and at the ſame time recollecting that his own was yet unwiped, he abated of his fury, and with great gravity applied to that function the unfiniſhed ſheets of the Conduct of the Earl of Nottingham.

A STRANGE

A STRANGE BUT TRUE

Mr. EDMUND CURLL,

of Fleet-ſtreet, Stationer,

Out of an extraordinary deſire of lucre, went into 'Change-alley, and was converted from the Chriſtian religion by certain eminent Jews: and how he was circumciſed and initiated into their myſteries.

AVARICE (as ſir Richard, in the third page of his Eſſays hath elegantly obſerved) is an inordinate impulſe of the ſoul towards the amaſſing or heaping together a ſuperfluity of wealth without the leaſt regard of applying it to its proper uſes.

And how the mind of man is poſſeſſed with this vice, may be ſeen every day both in the city and ſuburbs thereof. It has been always eſteemed by Plato, Puffendorf, and Socrates, as the darling vice of old-age: but now our young men are turned uſurers and ſtock-jobbers; and, inſtead of luſting after the real wives wives and daughters of our rich citizens, they covet nothing but their money and eſtates. Strange change of vice! when the concupiſcence of youth is converted into the covetouſneſs of age, and thoſe appetites are now become VENAL, which ſhould be VENEREAL.

In the firſt place, let us ſhew you how many of the ancient worthies and heroes of antiquity have been undone and ruined by this deadly ſin of avarice.

I ſhall take the liberty to begin with Brutus, that noble Roman. Does not Ætian inform us, that he received fifty broad pieces for the aſſaſſination of that renowned emperor Julius Cæſar, who fell a ſacrifice to the Jews, as ſir Edmund Bury Godfrey did to the Papiſts?

Did not Themiſtocles let in the Goths and Vandals into Carthage for a ſum of money, where they barbarouſly put out the other eye of the famous Hannibal? as Herodotus hath it in his ninth book upon the Roman medals.

Even the great Cato (as the late Mr. Addiſon hath very well obſerved) though otherwiſe a gentleman of good ſenſe, was not unſullied by this pecuniary contagion; for he ſold Athens to Artaxerxes Longimanus for a hundred rix-dollars, which in our money will amount to two talents and thirty ſeſtertii, according to Mr. Demoivre's calculation. See Heſiod in his ſeventh chapter of Faſts and Feſtivals.

Actuated by the ſame diabolical ſpirit of gain, Sylla the Roman conſul ſhot Alcibiades the ſenator with a piſtol, and robbed him of ſeveral bank bills and 'chequer notes to an immenſe value; for which he came to an untimely untimely end, and was denied chriſtian burial. Hence comes the proverb incidat in Syllam.

To come near to our own times, and give you one modern inſtance, though well known and often quoted by hiſtorians, viz. Echard, Dionyſius Halicarnaſſeus, Virgil, Horace, and others. 'Tis that, I mean, of the famous Godfrey of Bulloigne, one of the great heroes of the holy war, who robbed Cleopatra queen of Egypt of a diamond necklace, ear-rings, and a Tompion's gold watch (which was given her by Mark Antony) all theſe things were found in Godfrey's breeches pocket, when he was killed at the ſiege of Damaſcus.

Who then can wonder, after ſo many great and illuſtrious examples, that Mr. Edmund Curll the ſtationer ſhould renounce the chriſtian religion for the mammon of unrighteouſneſs, and barter his precious faith for the filthy proſpect of lucre in the preſent fluctuation of ſtocks?

It having been obſerved to Mr. Curll, by ſome of his ingenious authors, (who I fear are not overcharged with any religion) what immenſe ſums the Jews had got by * bubbles, etc. he immediately turned his mind from the buſineſs in which he was educated, but thrived little, and reſolved to quit his ſhop for 'Change-alley. Whereupon, falling into company with the Jews at their club at the ſign of the Croſs in Cornhill,

* Bubble was a name given to all the extravagant projects, for which ſubſcriptions were raiſed, and negotiated at vaſt premiums in 'Change-alley, in the year 1720. A name, which alluded to their production by the ferment of the South-ſea, and not to their ſplendor, emptineſs, and inutility; for it did not become a name of reproach in this caſe, till time completed the metaphor, and the bubble broke.

they

they began to tamper with him upon the moſt important points of the chriſtian faith, which he for ſome time zealouſly, and like a good chriſtian obſtinately defended. They promiſed him Paradiſe, and many other advantages hereafter, but he artfully inſinuated, that he was more inclinable to liſten to preſent gain. They took the hint, and promiſed him, that immediately upon his converſion to their perſuaſion he ſhould become as rich as a Jew.

They made uſe likewiſe of ſeveral other arguments; to wit,

That the wiſeſt man that ever was, and inaſmuch the richeſt, beyond all peradventure was a Jew, videlicet, Solomon.

That David, the man after God's own heart, was a Jew alſo. And moſt of the children of Iſrael are ſuſpected for holding the ſame doctrine.

This Mr. Curll at firſt ſtrenuouſly denied, for indeed he thought them Roman catholicks, and ſo far was he from giving way to their temptations, that to convince them of his chriſtianity he called for a pork griſking.

They now promiſed, if he would poiſon his wife, and give up his griſking, that he ſhould marry the rich Ben Meymon's only daughter. This made ſome impreſſion on him.

They then talked to him in the Hebrew tongue, which he not underſtanding, it was obſerved, had very great weight with him.

They now, perceiving that his godlineſs was only gain, deſiſted from all other arguments, and attacked him on his weak ſide, namely, that of avarice.

Upon which John Mendez offered him an eighth of an advantageous bargain for the apoſtles creed, which he readily and wickedly renounced.

He then ſold the nine and thirty articles for a * Bull; but inſiſted hard upon black-puddings, being a great lover thereof.

Joſhua Pereira engaged to let him ſhare with him in his bottomrye; upon this he was perſuaded out of his chriſtian name; but he ſtill adhered to black-puddings.

Sir Gideon Lopez tempted him with forty pound ſubſcription in Ram's bubble; for which he was content to give up the four evangeliſts, and he was now completed a perfect Jew, all but black-pudding and circumciſion; for both of which he would have been glad to have had a diſpenſation.

But, on the 17th of March, Mr. Curll (unknown to his wife) came to the tavern aforeſaid. At his entrance into the room he perceived a meagre man with a ſallow countenance, a black forky beard, and long veſtment. In his right hand he held a large pair of ſheers, and in his left a red-hot ſearing-iron. At ſight of this, Mr. Curll's heart trembled within him,

* Bulls and Bears. He who ſells that of which he is not poſſeſſed, is proverbially ſaid to ſell the ſkin before he has caught the bear: it was the practice of ſtock-jobbers, in the year 1720, to enter into contract for transferring S. S. ſtock at a future time for a certain price; but he who contracted to ſell had frequently no ſtock to transfer, nor did he who bought intend to receive any in conſequence of his bargain; the ſeller was therefore called a bear, in alluſion to the proverb; and the buyer a bull, perhaps only as a ſimilar diſtinction. The contract was merely a wager to be determined by the riſe or fall of ſtock; if it roſe, the ſeller paid the difference to the buyer proportioned to the ſum determined by the ſame computation to the ſeller.

and fain would he retire; but he was prevented by ſix Jews, who laid hands upon him, and unbuttoning his breeches threw him upon the table, a pale pitiful ſpectacle.

He now intreated them in the moſt moving tone of voice to diſpenſe with that unmanly ceremonial, which if they would conſent to, he faithfully promiſed, that he would eat a quarter of paſchal lamb with them the next Sunday following.

All theſe proteſtations availed him nothing, for they threatened him, that all contracts and bargains ſhould be void, unleſs he would ſubmit to bear all the outward and viſible ſigns of Judaiſm.

Our apoſtate hearing this ſtretched himſelf upon his back, ſpread his legs, and waited for the operation: but, when he ſaw the high-prieſt take up the cleft ſtick, he roared moſt unmercifully, and ſwore ſeveral chriſtian oaths, for which the Jews rebuked him.

The ſavour of the effluvia, that iſſued from him, convinced the old Levite and all his aſſiſtants, that he needed no preſent purgation, wherefore without further anointing him he proceeded in his office; when, by an unfortunate jerk upward of the impatient victim, he loſt five times as much as ever Jew did before.

They, finding that he was too much circumciſed, which by the levitical law is worſe than not being circumciſed at all, refuſed to ſtand to any of their contracts: wherefore they caſt him forth from their ſynagogue; and he now remains a moſt piteous, woful, and miſerable ſight at the ſign of the Old Teſtament and Dial in Fleet-ſtreet; his wife (poor woman) is is at this hour lamenting over him, wringing her hands and tearing her hair; for the barbarous Jews ſtill keep, and expoſe at Jonathan's and Garraway's, the memorial of her loſs, and her huſband's indignity.

PRAYER.

*(To ſave the ſtamp .)

KEEP us, we beſeech thee, from the hands of ſuch barbarous and cruel Jews, who albeit they abhor the blood of black-puddings, yet thirſt they vehemently after the blood of white ones. And that we may avoid ſuch-like calamities, may all good and well diſpoſed chriſtians be warned by this unhappy wretch's woful example, to abominate the heinous ſin of avarice, which ſooner or later will draw them into the cruel clutches of Satan, Papiſts, Jews, and Stock-jobbers. Amen.

* All forms of prayer and thankſgiving, books of devotion, etc. being excepted in the ſtatute of 12 Anne, (1712) charging pamphlets and papers contained in half a ſheet with one half-penny, and every ſuch paper, being one whole ſheet, with a ſtamp-duty of one penny for every copy.

GOD's REVENGE AGAINST PUNNING.

Shewing the miſerable fates of perſons addicted to this crying ſin, in court and town.

MANIFOLD have been the judgments, which heaven from time to time for the chaſtiſement of a ſinful people has inflicted on whole nations. For, when the degeneracy becomes common, 'tis but juſt the puniſhment ſhould be general: of this kind, in our own unfortunate country, was that deſtructive peſtilence, whoſe mortality was ſo fatal, as to ſweep away, if ſir William Petty may be believed, five millions of chriſtian ſouls, beſides women and Jews.

Such alſo was that dreadful conflagration enſuing, in this famous metropolis of London, which conſumed, according to the computation of ſir Samuel Morland, one hundred thouſand houſes, not to mention churches and ſtables.

Scarce had this unhappy nation recovered theſe funeſt diſaſters, when the abomination of play-houſes roſe up in this land: from hence hath an inundation of obſcenity flowed from the court and over-ſpread the kingdom: even infants disfigured the walls of holy temples with exorbitant repreſentations of the members of generation; nay, no ſooner had they learnt to ſpell, but they had wickedneſs enough to write the names thereof in large capitals: an enormity obſerved by travellers to be found in no country but England.

But when whoring and popery were driven hence by the happy revolution; ſtill the nation ſo greatly offended, that Socinianiſm, Arianiſm, and Whiſtoniſm triumphed in our ſtreets, and were in a manner become univerſal.

And yet ſtill, after all theſe viſitations, it has pleaſed heaven to viſit us with a contagion more epidemical, and of conſequence more fatal: this was foretold to us, firſt, by that unparallelled eclipſe in 1714: ſecondly, by the dreadful coruſcation in the air this preſent year: and, thirdly, by the nine comets ſeen at once over Soho-ſquare, by Mrs. Katherine Wadlington and others; a contagion that firſt crept in amongſt the firſt quality, deſcended to their footmen, and infuſed itſelf into their ladies: I mean the woful practice of PUNNING. This does occaſion the corruption of our language, and therein of the word of God tranſlated into our language, which certainly every ſober chriſtian muſt tremble at.

Now ſuch is the enormity of this abomination, that our very nobles not only commit punning over tea, and in taverns, but even on the Lord's day, and in the king's chapel; therefore, to deter men from this evil evil practice, I ſhall give ſome true and dreadful examples of God's revenge againſt punſters.

The right honourable ——— but it is not ſafe to inſert the name of an eminent nobleman in this paper, yet I will venture to ſay that ſuch a one has been ſeen; which is all we can ſay, conſidering the largeneſs of his ſleeves: this young nobleman was not only a flagitious punſter himſelf, but was acceſſary to the punning of others, by conſent, by provocation, by connivance, and by defence of the evil committed; for which the Lord mercifully ſpared his neck, but as a mark of reprobation wried his noſe.

Another nobleman of great hopes, no leſs guilty of the ſame crime, was made the puniſher of himſelf with his own hand, in the loſs of five hundred pounds at box and dice; whereby this unfortunate young gentleman incurred the heavy diſpleaſure of his aged grandmother.

A third, of no leſs illuſtrious extraction, for the ſame vice, was permitted to fall into the arms of a Dalilah, who may one day cut off his curious hair, and deliver him up to the Philiſtines.

Colonel F——, an ancient gentleman of grave deportment, gave into this ſin ſo early in his youth, that, whenever his tongue endeavours to ſpeak common ſenſe, he heſitates ſo as not to be underſtood.

Thomas Pickle, gentleman, for the ſame crime baniſhed to Minorca.

Muley Hamet, from a healthy and hopeful officer in the army, turned a miſerable invalid at Tilbury-fort.

——— Euſtace, Eſq; for the murder of much of the king's Engliſh in Ireland is quite deprived of his reaſon, and now remains a lively inſtance of emptineſs and vivacity.

Poor Daniel Button for the ſame offence deprived of his wits.

One Samuel, an Iriſhman, for his forward attempt to pun, was ſtunted in his ſtature, and hath been viſited all his life after with bulls and blunders.

George Simmons, ſhoemaker at Turnſtile in Holborn, was ſo given to this cuſtom, and did it with ſo much ſucceſs, that his neighbours gave out he was a wit, which report coming among his creditors, no-body would truſt him; ſo that he is now a bankrupt, and his family in a miſerable condition.

Divers eminent clergymen of the univerſity of Cambridge, for having propagated this vice, became great drunkards and tories.

From which calamities the Lord in his mercy defend us all, etc. etc.

A WON-

Taken from the mouth of the ſpirit of a perſon, who was barbarouſly ſlain by the

MOHOCKS;

PROVING ALSO

That the ſaid Mohocks and Hawcubites are the Gog and Magog mentioned in the Revelations;

And therefore that this vain and tranſitory world will ſhortly be brought to its final diſſolution.

Breathed forth in the year 1712.

Woe! Woe! Woe!

WOE to London! Woe to Weſtminſter! Woe to Southwark! and woe to the inhabitants thereof!

I am loth to ſay, Woe to the old and new churches, thoſe that are built, and thoſe that are not built!

But woe to the gates, the ſtreets, and the houſes! Woe to the men, the women, and the children! for the MOHOCKS and HAWCUBITES are already come, the time draweth near, and the end approacheth!

Not to mention the near reſemblance betwixt the names of MOHOCK and GOG, HAWCUBITE and MAGOG (though I think there is a great deal even in that) I ſhall go on to proceed in my more ſolid arguments, proving to you not only the things that are, but alſo the things that are not.

The things that are, are the MOHOCKS and HAWCUBITES; the things that are not, are GOG and MAGOG; and yet both the things that are, and the things that are not, are one and the ſame thing.

How this matter is, or when it is to be fulfilled, neither you nor I know, but I only.

For, when the MOHOCKS and HAWCUBITES came, Satan came alſo among them; and where Satan is, there are GOG and MAGOG alſo.

They have the mark of the beaſt in their foreheads, and the beaſt himſelf is in their hearts, their teeth are ſharp like the teeth of lions, their tails are fiery like the tails of ſcorpions, and their hair is as the hair of women.

Here the ſpirit pauſed a while———and thus again proceeded:

Now liſten to what is to come.

Thoſe that are in ſhall abide in, and thoſe that are out ſhall abide out.——Yet thoſe that are in ſhall be as thoſe that are out, and thoſe that are out ſhall be as thoſe that are in.

Be

Be not dejected——fear not——but believe and tremble.

The lions of this world are dead, and the princes of this world are dead alſo, and the next world draweth nigh.

That ancient Whig, the Antichriſt of St. John, ſhall lead the van like a young dragon, but he ſhall be cut piece-mail, and diſpoſſeſſed.

The dragon upon Bow-church, and the graſshopper upon the Royal-exchange, ſhall meet together upon Stocks-market, and ſhake hands like brethren.

Shake therefore your heads, O ye people! my time is ſhort, and yours is not long: lengthen therefore your repentance, and ſhorten your iniquities.

Lo! the comet appeareth in the South! yea, it appeareth exceedingly. Ah poor deluded Chriſtians! Ah blind brethren! think not that this baleful dog-ſtar only ſhaketh his tail at you in waggery; no, it ſhaketh it as a rod. It is not a ſporting tail, but a fiery tail, even as the tail of a harlot; yea, ſuch a tail as may reach, and be told, to all poſterity.

I am the porter, that was barbarouſly ſlain in Fleet-ſtreet: by the MOHOCKS and HAWCUBITES was I ſlain, when they laid violent hands upon me.

They put their hook into my mouth, they divided my noſtrils aſunder, they ſent me, as they thought, to my long home; but now I am returned again to foretell their deſtruction.

The time is at hand, when the Free-thinkers of Great-Britain ſhall be converted to Judaiſm: and the Sultan ſhall receive the fore-ſkins of ‡ Toland and Collins in a box of gold.

Sultan

Yet two days, a day, and half a day, yea, upon the twelfth hour of the fourth day, thoſe emblems of GOG and MAGOG at the Guild-hall ſhall fall to the ground, and be broken aſunder. With them ſhall periſh the MOHOCKS and HAWCUBITES, and the whole world ſhall periſh with them.

Here the ſpirit diſappeared, and immediately thereupon held his peace.

COUNTRY-POST.

From Tueſday, Auguſt the 12*th*, to Thurſday, Auguſt the 14*th*.

From the hen-rooſt, Auguſt the 4*th*.

TWO days ago we were put in a dreadful conſternation by the advance of a kite, which threatened every minute to fall upon us; he made ſeveral motions as if he deſigned to attack our left wing, which covered our infantry. We were alarmed at his approach, and, upon a general muſter of all our forces, the kitchen-maid came to our relief; but we were ſoon convinced, that ſhe had betrayed us, and was in the intereſt of the kite aforeſaid; for ſhe twiſted off two of our companions necks, and ſtript them naked: five of us were alſo clapped in a cloſe priſon, in order to be ſold for ſlaves the next market-day.

P. S. The black hen was laſt night ſafely delivered of ſeven young ducks.

From

From the garden, Auguſt the 3*d.*

The boars have done much miſchief of late in theſe parts, to ſuch a degree, that not a turnip or carrot can lie ſafe in their beds. Yeſterday ſeveral of them were taken, and ſentenced to have a wooden engine put about their necks, to have their noſes bored, and rings thruſt through them, as a mark of infamy for ſuch practices.

From the great pond, Auguſt the 1*ſt.*

Yeſterday a large ſail of ducks paſſed by here, after a ſmall reſiſtance from two little boys, who flung ſtones at them; they landed near the barn-door, where they foraged with very good ſucceſs: while they were upon this enterprize, an old turkey-cock attacked a maid in a red petticoat, and ſhe retired with great precipitation. This afternoon, being ſomewhat rainy, they ſet ſail again, and took ſeveral frogs. Juſt now arrived the parſon's wife, and twenty ducks were brought forth before her in order to be tried, but for what crime we know not, however two of them were condemned; 'twas alſo obſerved, that ſhe carried off a goſling and three ſucking-pigs.

From the little fort at the end of the garden, Auguſt the 5*th.*

Laſt night two young men of this place made a detachment of their breeches, in order, as it is thought, to poſſeſs themſelves of the two overtures of the ſaid fort; but at their approach they heard great firing from from the port-holes; they found them already bombarded by the rear-guard of Sarah and Suky, who, fearing theſe young men were come to beat up their quarters, deſerted their neceſſary poſts, which were immediately taken poſſeſſion of, notwithſtanding they were much annoyed by reaſon of ſeveral ſtink-pots, that had been flung there the ſame morning.

From the barley-mow near the barn, Auguſt the 3*d.*

It was yeſterday rumoured, that there was heard a mighty ſqueaking near this place, as of an army of mice, who were thought to lie in ambuſcade in the ſaid mow: upon this the farmer aſſembled together a council of neighbours, wherein it was reſolved, that the mow ſhould be removed to prevent the farther deſtruction of the forage. This day the affair was put in execution; four hundred and ſeventy-nine mice and three large rats were killed, and a vaſt number wounded, by pitch-forks and other inſtruments of huſbandry. A mouſe, that was cloſe purſued, took ſhelter under Dolly's petticoats, but by the vigilance of George Simmons he was taken, as he was endeavouring to force his way through a deep moraſs, and cruſhed to death on the ſpot. There was nothing material happened the next day, only Cicily Hart was obſerved to make water under the ſaid mow, as ſhe was going a milking.

From the great yard, Auguſt the 2*d.*

It is very credibly reported, that there is a treaty of marriage on foot between the old red cock and the pyed pyed hen, they having of late appeared very much in publick together: he yeſterday made her a preſent of three barley-corns, ſo that we look on this affair as concluded. This is the ſame cock that fought a duel for her about a month ago.

From the 'ſquire's houſe.

On Sunday laſt there was a noble entertainment in our great hall, where were preſent the parſon and the farmer: the parſon eat like a farmer and the farmer like a parſon: we refer you to the curious in calculations to decide which eat moſt.

It is reported, that the miniſter chriſtened a male child laſt week, but it wants confirmation.

From the juſtices meeting, Auguſt the 7th.

This day a jack-daw, well known in the pariſh, was ordered cloſe priſoner to a cage, for crying Cuckold to a juſtice of the quorum; and the ſame evening certain apples, for hiſſing in a diſreſpectful manner as they were roaſting, were committed to lambs wool. The ſame day the ſaid juſtices cauſed a pig to be whipt to death, and eat the ſame, being convicted of ſqueaking on the 10th of June.

From the church, Auguſt the 8th.

Divine ſervice is continued in our pariſh as uſual, though we have ſeldom the company of any of the neighbouring gentry; by whoſe manner of living it may be conjectured, that the advices from this place are not credited by them, or elſe regarded as matters of little conſequence.

From the church-yard, Auguſt the 8*th.*

The miniſter, having obſerved his only daughter to ſeem too much affected with the intercourſe of his bull and the cows of the pariſh, has ordered the ceremony for the future to be performed not in his own court, but in the church-yard; where, at the firſt ſolemnity of that kind, the grave-ſtones of John Fry, Peter How, and Mary d'Urfey were ſpurned down. This has already occaſioned great debates in the veſtry, the latter being the deceaſed wife of the ſinging-clerk of this place.

Caſualties this week.

Several caſualties have happened this week, and the bill of mortality is very much increaſed. There have have died of the falling-ſickneſs two ſtumbling horſes, as alſo one of their riders. Smothered (in onions) ſeven rabbits. Stifled (in a ſoldier's breeches) two geeſe. Of a ſore-throat, ſeveral ſheep and calves at the butcher's. Starved to death, one baſtard-child nurſed at the pariſh charge. Still-born, in eggs of turkeys, geeſe, ducks, and hens, thirty-ſix. Drowned, nine puppies. Of wind in the bowels, five bottles of ſmall-beer. I have not yet ſeen the exact liſt of the pariſh-clerk, ſo that, for a more particular account, we refer you to our next.

We have nothing material as to the ſtocks, only that Dick Adams was ſet in them laſt Sunday for ſwearing.

A TRUE

A TRUE AND FAITHFUL

What paſſed in LONDON during the general conſternation of all ranks and degrees of mankind,

On Tueſday, Wedneſday, Thurſday, and Friday laſt.

ON Tueſday the 13th of October Mr. Whiſton held his lecture near the Royal Exchange to an audience of fourteen worthy citizens, his ſubſcribers and conſtant hearers. Beſides theſe there were five chance auditors for that night only, who had paid their ſhillings a-piece. I think myſelf obliged to be very particular in this relation, leſt my veracity ſhould be ſuſpected; which makes me appeal to the men who were preſent; of which number, I myſelf was one. Their names are Henry Watſon, haberdaſher.

George Hancock, druggiſt.

Henry Theobald, watch-maker.

Mr. Whiſton began by acquainting us, that (contrary to his advertiſement) he thought himſelf in duty and conſcience obliged to change the ſubject-matter of his intended diſcourſe. —— Here he pauſed, and ſeemed for a ſhort ſpace as it were loſt in devotion and mental prayer; after which, with great earneſtneſs and vehemence he ſpake as follows:

" Friends and fellow-citizens, all ſpeculative ſci-
" ence is at an end: the period of all things is at " hand; on Friday next this world ſhall be no more.
" Put not your confidence in me, brethren, for to" morrow morning five minutes after five the truth
" will be evident; in that inſtant the comet ſhall ap" pear, of which I have heretofore warned you. As

" ye

" ye have heard, believe. Go hence, and prepare " your wives, your families, and friends, for the uni- " verſal change."

At this ſolemn and dreadful prediction the whole ſociety appeared in the utmoſt aſtoniſhment: but it would be unjuſt not to remember, that Mr. Whiſton himſelf was in ſo calm a temper as to return a ſhilling a-piece to the youths, who had been diſappointed of their lecture, which I thought, from a man of his integrity, a convincing proof of his own faith in the prediction.

As we thought it a duty, in charity, to warn all men; in two or three hours the news had ſpread through the city. At firſt indeed our report met with but little credit, it being by our greateſt dealers in ſtocks thought only a court artifice to ſink them, that ſome choice favourites might purchaſe at a lower rate; for the South ſea that very evening fell five per cent. the India eleven; and all the other funds in proportion. But at the court end of the town our atteſtations were entirely diſbelieved, or turned into ridicule; yet nevertheleſs the news ſpread every where, and was the ſubject matter of all converſation.

That very night (as I was credibly informed) Mr. Whiſton was ſent for to a great lady, who is very curious in the learned ſciences, and addicted to all the ſpeculative doubts of the moſt able philoſophers; but he was not now to be found: and, ſince at other times he has been known not to decline that honour, I make no doubt he concealed himſelf to attend the great buſineſs of his ſoul: but whether it was the lady's faith, or inquiſitiveneſs, that occaſioned her to ſend, is a point I ſhall not preſume to determine. As for his being ſent for to the ſecretary's office by a meſſenger, it is now known to be a matter notoriouſly falſe, and indeed at firſt it had little credit with me, that ſo zealous and honeſt a man ſhould be ordered into cuſtody, as a ſeditious preacher, who is known to be ſo well affected to the preſent happy eſtabliſhment.

It was now I reflected with exceeding trouble and ſorrow, that I had diſuſed family-prayers for above five years, and (though it has been a cuſtom of late entirely neglected by men of any buſineſs or ſtation) I determined within myſelf no longer to omit ſo reaſonable and religious a duty. I acquainted my wife with my intentions: but, two or three neighbours having been engaged to ſup with us that night, and many hours being unwarily ſpent at cards, I was prevailed on by her to put it off till the next day; ſhe reaſoning, that it would be time enough to take off the ſervants from their buſineſs (which this practice muſt infallibly occaſion for an hour or two every day) after the comet had made its appearance.

Zachary Bowen, a quaker, and my next neighbour, had no ſooner heard of the prophecy, but he made me a viſit. I informed him of every thing I had heard, but found him quite obſtinate in his unbelief; for, ſaid he, be comforted, friend, thy tidings are impoſſibilities, for, were theſe things to happen, they muſt have been foreſeen by ſome of our brethren. This indeed (as in all other ſpiritual caſes with this ſett of people) was his only reaſon againſt believing me; and, as he was fully perſuaded that the prediction was erroneous, he in a very neighbourly manner admoniſhed me againſt ſelling my ſtock at the preſent low price; which, he ſaid, beyond diſpute muſt have a riſe before Monday, when this unreaſonable conſternation ſhould be over.

But on Wedneſday morning (I believe to the exact calculation of Mr. Whiſton) the comet appeared: for at three minutes after five by my own watch I ſaw it. He indeed foretold, that it would be ſeen at five minutes after five, but, as the beſt watches may be a minute or two too ſlow, I am apt to think his calculation juſt to a minute.

In leſs than a quarter of an hour all Cheapſide was crouded with a vaſt concourſe of people, and, notwithſtanding it was ſo early, it is thought, that, through all that part of the town, there was not man, woman, or child, except the ſick or infirm, left in their beds. From my own balcony, I am confident, I ſaw ſeveral thouſands in the ſtreet, and counted at leaſt ſeventeen who were upon their knees, and ſeemed in actual devotion. Eleven of them indeed appeared to be old women of about fourſcore; the ſix others were men in advanced life, but (as I could gueſs) two of them might be under ſeventy.

It is highly probable, that an event of this nature may be paſſed over by the greater hiſtorians of our times, as conducing very little or nothing to the unravelling and laying open the deep ſchemes of politicians and myſteries of ſtate; for which reaſon, I thought it might not be unacceptable to record the facts, which in the ſpace of three days came to my knowledge, either as an eye witneſs, or from unqueſtionable authorities; nor can I think this narrative will be entirely without its uſe, as it may enable us to form a more juſt idea of our countrymen in general, particularly in regard to their faith, religion, morals, and politicks.

Before Wedneſday noon the belief was univerſal, that the day of judgment was at hand, inſomuch, that a waterman of my acquaintance told me, he counted no leſs than one hundred and twenty-three clergymen, who had been ferried over to Lambeth before twelve o'clock: theſe, it is ſaid, went thither to petition, that a ſhort prayer might be penned, and ordered, there being none in the ſervice upon that occaſion. But as in things of this nature it is neceſſary that the council be conſulted, their requeſt was not immediately complied with; and this I affirm to be the true and only reaſon, that the churches were not that morning ſo well attended; and is in no ways to be imputed to the fears and conſternation of the clergy, with which the free-thinkers have ſince very unjuſtly reproached them.

My wife and I went to church (where we had not been for many years on a week day) and, with a very large congregation, were diſappointed of the ſervice. But (what will be ſcarce credible) by the careleſſneſs of a 'prentice, in our abſence, we had a piece of fine cambrick carried off by a ſhop-lifter: ſo little impreſſion was yet made on the minds of thoſe wicked women!

I cannot omit the care of a particular director of the Bank; I hope the worthy and wealthy knight will forgive me, that I endeavour to do him juſtice; for it was was unqueſtionably owing to * ſir Gilbert Heathcote's ſagacity, that all the fire-offices were required to have a particular eye upon the bank of England. Let it be recorded to his praiſe, that in the general hurry this ſtruck him as his neareſt and tendereſt concern; but the next day in the evening, after having taken due care of all his books, bills, and bonds, I was informed his mind was wholly turned upon ſpiritual matters; yet, ever and anon, he could not help expreſſing his reſentment againſt the Tories and Jacobites, to whom he imputed that ſudden run upon the bank, which happened on this occaſion.

A great man (whom at this time it may not be prudent to name) employed all the Wedneſday morning to make up ſuch an account, as might appear fair, in caſe he ſhould be called upon to produce it on the Friday; but was forced to deſiſt, after having for ſeveral hours together attempted it, not being able to bring himſelf to a reſolution to truſt the many hundred articles of his ſecret tranſactions upon paper.

Another ſeemed to be very melancholy, which his flatterers imputed to his dread of loſing his power in a day or two; but I rather take it, that his chief concern was the terror of being tried in a court that could not be influenced, and where a majority of voices could avail him nothing. It was obſerved too, that he had few viſiters that day; this added ſo much to his mortification, that he read through the firſt chapter of the book of Job, and wept over it bitterly; in ſhort, he ſeemed a true penitent in every thing, but in charity to his neighbour. No buſineſs was that day done in his compting-houſe; it is ſaid too, that he was adviſed to reſtitution, but I never heard that he complied with it any farther, than in giving half a crown a-piece to ſeveral crazed and ſtarving creditors, who attended in the outward room.

* Sir Gilbert Heathcote had before ſignaliſed his care for the Bank, when in equal danger, by petitioning againſt the lord treaſurer Godolphin's being removed, as a meaſure that would deſtroy the publick credit. See p. 71, note.

Three of the maids of honour ſent to countermand their birth-day cloaths; two of them burnt all their collections of novels and romances, and ſent to a book-ſeller's in Pall mall to buy each of them a Bible, and Taylor's holy living and dying. But I muſt do all of them the juſtice to acknowledge, that they ſhewed a very decent behaviour in the drawing-room, and reſtrained themſelves from thoſe innocent freedoms and little levities ſo commonly incident to young ladies of their profeſſion. So many birth-day ſuits were countermanded the next day, that moſt of the taylors and mantua-makers diſcharged all their journeymen and women. A grave elderly lady of great erudition and modeſty, who viſits theſe young ladies, ſeemed to be extremely ſhocked by the apprehenſions, that ſhe was to appear naked before the whole world; and no leſs ſo, that all mankind was to appear naked before her; which might ſo much divert her thoughts, as to incapacitate her to give ready and apt anſwers to the interrogatories that might be made her. The maids of honour, who had both modeſty and curioſity, could not imagine the ſight ſo diſagreeable as was repreſented; nay, one of them went ſo far as to ſay, ſhe perfectly longed longed to ſee it; for it could not be ſo indecent, when every-body was to be alike; and they had a day or two to prepare themſelves to be ſeen in that condition. Upon this reflection, each of them ordered a bathing-tub to be got ready that evening, and a looking-glaſs to be ſet by it. So much are theſe young ladies both by nature and cuſtom addicted to cleanly appearance.

A weſt-country gentleman told me, he got a church-leaſe filled up that morning for the ſame ſum, which had been refuſed for three years ſucceſſively. I muſt impute this merely to accident; for I cannot imagine that any divine could take the advantage of his tenant in ſo unhandſome a manner; or that the ſhortneſs of the life was in the leaſt his conſideration; though I have heard the ſame worthy prelate aſperſed and maligned ſince upon this very account.

The term being ſo near, the alarm among the LAWYERS was inexpreſſible, though ſome of them, I was told, were ſo vain as to promiſe themſelves ſome advantage in making their defence, by being verſed in the practice of our earthly courts. It is ſaid too, that ſome of the chief pleaders were heard to expreſs great ſatisfaction, that there had been but few ſtate-trials of late years. Several attornies demanded the return of fees, that had been given the lawyers: but it was anſwered, the fee was undoubtedly charged to their client, and that they could not connive at ſuch injuſtice as to ſuffer it to be ſunk in the attorney's pockets. Our ſage and learned judges had great conſolation, inſomuch as they had not pleaded at the bar for ſeveral years; the barriſters rejoiced in that they were not attornies, tornies, and the attornies felt no leſs ſatisfaction, that they were not petti-foggers, ſcriveners, and other meaner officers of the law.

As to the ARMY, far be it from me to conceal the truth. Every ſoldier's behaviour was as undiſmayed, and undaunted, as if nothing was to happen: I impute not this to their want of faith, but to their martial diſpoſition; though I cannot help thinking they commonly accompany their commands with more oaths than are requiſite, of which there was no remarkable diminution this morning on the parade in St. James's park. But poſſibly it was by choice, and on conſideration, that they continued this way of expreſſion, not to intimidate the common ſoldiers, or give occaſion to ſuſpect, that even the fear of damnation could make any impreſſion upon their ſuperior officers. A duel was fought the ſame morning between two colonels, not occaſioned (as was reported) becauſe the one was put over the other's head; that being a point, which might at ſuch a juncture have been accommodated by the mediation of friends; but, as this was upon the account of a lady, it was judged it could not be put off at this time, above all others, but demanded immediate ſatisfaction: I am apt to believe, that a young officer, who deſired his ſurgeon to defer putting him into a ſalivation till Saturday, might make this requeſt out of ſome opinion he had of the truth of the prophecy; for the apprehenſions of any danger in the operation could not be his motive, the ſurgeon himſelf aſſured me, that he had before undergone three ſevere operations of the like nature with great reſignation and fortitude.

There

There was an order iſſued, that the chaplains of the ſeveral regiments ſhould attend their duty; but, as they were diſperſed about in ſeveral parts of England, it was believed that moſt of them could not be found, or ſo much as heard of, till the great day was over.

Moſt of the conſiderable PHYSICIANS by their outward demeanour ſeemed to be unbelievers; but, at the ſame time, they every-where inſinuated, that there might be a peſtilential malignancy in the air, occaſioned by the comet, which might be armed againſt by proper and timely medicines. This caution had but little effect; for, as the time approached, the chriſtian reſignation of the people encreaſed, and moſt of them (which was never before known) had their ſouls more at heart than their bodies.

If the reverend CLERGY ſhewed more concern than others, I charitably impute it to their great charge of ſouls; and what confirmed me in this opinion was, that the degrees of apprehenſion and terror could be diſtinguiſhed to be greater or leſs, according to their ranks and degrees in the church.

The like might be obſerved in all ſorts of miniſters, though not of the church of England; the higher their rank, the more was their fear.

I ſpeak not of the COURT, for fear of offence; and I forbear inſerting the names of particular perſons, to avoid the imputation of ſlander, ſo that the reader will allow the narrative muſt be deficient, and is therefore deſired to accept hereof rather as a ſketch, than a regular circumſtantial hiſtory.

I was not informed of any perſons who ſhewed the leaſt leaſt joy; except three malefactors, who were to be executed on the Monday following, and one old man, a conſtant church-goer, who, being at the point of death, expreſt ſome ſatisfaction at the news.

On Thurſday morning there was little or nothing tranſacted in 'Change-alley; there were a multitude of ſellers, but ſo few buyers, that one cannot affirm the ſtocks bore any certain price except among the Jews; who this day reaped great profit by their infidelity. There were many who called themſelves chriſtians, who offered to buy for time, but, as theſe were people of great diſtinction, I chuſe not to mention them, becauſe in effect it would ſeem to accuſe them both of avarice and infidelity.

The run upon the bank is too well known to need a particular relation; for it can never be forgotten, that no one perſon whatever (except the directors themſelves, and ſome of their particular friends and aſſociates) could convert a bill all that day into ſpecie; all hands being employed to ſerve them.

In the ſeveral churches of the city and ſuburbs there were ſeven thouſand two hundred and forty-five, who publickly and ſolemnly declared before the congregation, that they took to wife their ſeveral kept miſtreſſes, which was allowed as valid marriage, the prieſt not having time to pronounce the ceremony in form.

At St. Bride's church in Fleet-ſtreet Mr. Woolſton (who writ againſt the miracles of our Saviour) in the utmoſt terrors of conſcience, made a publick recantation.

tion. Dr. * Mandevil (who had been groundleſsly reported formerly to have done the ſame) did it now in good earneſt at St. James's-gate; as did alſo at the Temple church ſeveral gentlemen, who frequent coffee-houſes near the bar. So great was the faith and fear of two of them, that they dropt dead on the ſpot; but I will not record their names, leſt I ſhould be thought invidiouſly to lay an odium on their families and poſterity.

Moſt of the players, who had very little faith before, were now deſirous of having as much as they could, and therefore embraced the Roman Catholick religion; the ſame thing was obſerved of ſome bawds, and ladies of pleaſure.

An iriſh gentleman out of pure friendſhip came to make me a viſit, and adviſed me to hire a boat for the enſuing day, and told me, that, unleſs I gave earneſt for one immediately, he feared it might be too late; for his country-men had ſecured almoſt every boat upon the river, as judging, that in the general conflagration to be upon the water would be the ſafeſt place.

There were two lords, and three commoners, who, out of ſcruple of conſcience, very haſtily threw up their penſions, as imagining a penſion was only an annual retaining bribe. All the other great penſioners, I was told, had their ſcruples quieted by a clergyman or two of diſtinction, whom they happily conſulted.

It was remarkable, that ſeveral of our very richeſt

tradeſmen of the city, in common charity, gave away ſhillings and ſix-pences to the beggars, who plyed about the church-doors; and, at a particular church in the city, a wealthy church warden with his own hands diſtributed fifty twelve-penny loaves to the poor by way of reſtitution for the many great and coſtly feaſts which he had eaten of at their expence.

Three great ladies, a valet de chambre, two lords, a cuſtom-houſe officer, five half-pay captains, and a baronet, (all noted gameſters) came publickly into a church at Weſtminſter, and depoſited a very conſiderable ſum of money in the miniſter's hands; the parties, whom they had defrauded, being either out of town, or not to be found. But ſo great is the hardneſs of heart of this fraternity, that, among either the noble or vulgar gameſters, (though the profeſſion is ſo general) I did not hear of any other reſtitution of this ſort. At the ſame time I muſt obſerve that (in compariſon of theſe) through all parts of the town, the juſtice and penitence of the highwaymen, houſe-breakers, and common pick-pockets, was very remarkable.

The directors of our publick companies were in ſuch dreadful apprehenſions, that one would have thought a parliamentary enquiry was at hand; yet ſo great was their preſence of mind, that all the Thurſday morning was taken up in private transfers, which by malicious people was thought to be done with deſign to conceal their effects.

I forbear mentioning the private confeſſions of particular ladies to their huſbands; for as their children were born in wedlock, and of conſequence are legiti-mate, it would be an invidious taſk to record them as baſtards; and particularly after their ſeveral huſbands have ſo charitably forgiven them.

The evening and night through the whole town were ſpent in devotions both publick and private; the churches for this one day were ſo crouded by the nobility and gentry, that thouſands of common people were ſeen praying in the publick ſtreets. In ſhort, one would have thought the whole town had been really and ſeriouſly religious. But, what was very remarkable, all the different perſuaſions kept by themſelves, for, as each thought the other would be damned, not one would join in prayer with the other.

At length Friday came, and the people covered all the ſtreets; expecting, watching, and praying. But, as the day wore away, their fears firſt began to abate, then leſſened every hour, at night they were almoſt extinct, till the total darkneſs, that hitherto uſed to terrify, now comforted every free-thinker and atheiſt. Great numbers went together to the taverns, beſpoke ſuppers, and broke up whole hogſheads for joy. The ſubject of all wit and converſation was to ridicule the prophecy, and railly each other. All the quality and gentry were perfectly aſhamed, nay, ſome utterly diſowned that they had manifeſted any ſigns of religion.

But the next day even the common people, as well as their betters, appeared in their uſual ſtate of indifference. They drank, they whored, they ſwore, they lyed, they cheated, they plundered, they gamed, they quarrelled, they murdered. In ſhort, the world went on in the old channel.

I need

I need not give any inſtances of what will ſo eaſily be credited; but I cannot omit relating, that Mr. Woolſton advertiſed in that very Saturday's Evening Poſt a new Treatiſe againſt the miracles of our Saviour; and that the few, who had given up their penſions the day before, ſolicited to have them continued; which, as they had not been thrown up upon any miniſterial point, I am informed was readily granted.
